Bargainers settle with 21 hours to spare

Central Telephone negotiators accept new contract package, strike averted

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

A last-minute, weekend contract offer averted a strike by Central Telephone Co. employes in Des Plaines and Park Ridge.

Negotiators for Local 336 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the telephone firm agreed to tentative contract terms about 3 a.m. Saturday. The negotiators began the session about 9 a.m. Friday.

The agreement came about 21 hours before an estimated 1,000 union members were scheduled to strike. The union contract ended at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

Local 336 negotiators will recommend acceptance of the package, Thomas L. Beagley, president and business manager of the union, said Sunday.

A MEETING to ratify the contract will "be either Saturday or Monday; we've not sure yet."

Terms of the proposed contract will be outlined at the ratification meeting, he said. "We don't want to pass out the details yet. It will all be explained at the meeting."

Length of the new contract and possible wage increases "are part of the details we don't want to discuss," Beagley said. "I will say that I was surprised they (Central) came as far as they did."

"I can't say for sure that there won't be a strike," he said. The contract must be approved by union members to avoid a walkout.

CENTRAL EMPLOYES — protesting contract settlement delays — gave union negotiators power to call a Sunday strike in a 496-to-207 vote last Thursday. The vote sent negotiators to round-the-clock sessions. Two months of discussion had stalled on "technical contract language" without mention of wages.

The union demanded a 50-cent-per-hour wage hike for journeymen, traffic, commercial, plant, clerical and billing department employes. Requested raise for apprentices was 30-cents an hour.

Other demands included — an increase from two to three weeks vacation time after five years employment; more medical benefits including dental insurance; double pay for Sunday work and overtime on Saturday; and an employes savings plan.

Proposed settlement timing is similar to 1970 when negotiators agreed on contract terms about five hours before a scheduled walkout.

Say, remember Secretariat?

by DOUG RAY

There were 2,000 people on the infield grass at Arlington Park Saturday, drinking, yelling, sleeping, sunbathing.

But a little man, slightly larger than the jockeys, with a freshly cropped haircut and dressed in his Sunday best, stood out in the crowd. He was listening to his transistor radio and talking to whoever would listen.

Few paid attention, because on the infield you don't have to. You can walk a few hundred feet to another grassy spot and get away from it all to watch ducks on a pond or listen to a high school jazz band or most anything else.

This little man wasn't really a horse player but Saturday was super — the superhorse, the supertrack, the superday, with the sun splashing a glare over the race course. It was all there, and 41,223 paid to get inside the gates of the race track.

WHAT THEY came to see was Secretariat, the big, red chestnut colt, with three white stockings, star on his head and blinkers over his forehad to keep his eyes off the crowd that would smash together by the rail to get a glimpse of him.

"I almost had it," he said. "I had 5, 3, 1 . . . I just missed . . . If that nag wouldn've come in." This was the second race and the bulk of the afternoon remained before Secretariat would be led onto the track for all to see.

He changed the dial on the radio and started talking about baseball. "Wasn't that some Cub game yesterday? Hiser hit a home run in the ninth." In the midst of the biggest racing event in the Midwest in years, he was talking about baseball.

He took his spot in the pay line where he got back less money than he had bet. But he was happy. He wouldn't lose a lot, because people on the infield don't bet a lot. There were longer lines at the hot dog stand than at the betting windows.

THE AFTERNOON'S card of racing continued and more fans packed into the grandstand and clubhouse, and more crossed the track to the infield area, which was open to the public for the first time ever.

At about 5:20, the announcer began the ceremony of the Arlington Invitational and the horse everyone came to see. The crowd shoved closer to the rail. In some places, near the finish line, they were six deep, children were perched on their father's shoulders, many spectators were standing on chairs and on one another.

"Behind the yellow cord," Dave Link, Arlington Park security chief, barked over a megaphone. "I'm not naive enough to think I can keep you back, but let's not ruin this race."

The crowd wasn't to be held back. They swept up closer and closer. Cameras clicked. A young girl yelled to her friend. "Get over here. This is what we came to see. Don't miss it. Hurry up."

FINALLY THE tiers of people

Residents complain about C&NW yard noise

Noise is the problem.

About 60 Des Plaines residents are rumbling, making noise about the noise at the Chicago & North Western's railroad yard near Cumberland Terrace.

The residents, who signed a petition last week protesting the noise, will ask Des Plaines aldermen "to eliminate the noise disturbance emitted from the yard" during tonight's city council meeting.

ALSO ON THE council agenda is:

— An ordinance dropping the city from the DAMP water commission. The commission was formed in 1964 to secure water from Lake Michigan. Des Plaines now purchases water from Lake Michigan.

• An ordinance approving rezoning for downtown redevelopment. The Superblock zoning request is on first reading and could be moved to passage by a majority vote of aldermen at the 8 p.m. meeting.

• An ordinance appointing members of Des Plaines Bicentennial Commission. A council committee has nominated unsuccessful mayoral candidate David Wolf to head the commission. Wolf is two-time president of Des Plaines historical society.

• A report from City Building Comr. Alfred Prickett that names Forest Hospital as owner of a home at 1771 Rand Rd.

Between 7 and 10 persons live in the house, although the city building code prohibits more than three unrelated persons in a single-family residence. Prickett filed "short form" complaints against the hospital two weeks ago for office and multi-family use on homes on the north side of Rand.

THE RAILROAD yard noise problem was aired at Wednesday's meeting of the city's environmental control commission.

Mrs. Marie Schliep, 387 Woodbridge, told the commission that city environmental officer Philip Lindhald "did not represent us properly" at May 15 hearings of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency in Chicago.

"We can't understand why we have a law and no one is enforcing it. The railroad is violating a city ordinance," she told the Herald Friday.

The city has filed a complaint in Des Plaines Traffic Court seeking a fine of the railroad for exceeding ordinance noise levels. A hearing is scheduled July 30. Three readings by Lindahl in the railroad yard exceeded the 55 decibel maximum allowed by ordinance, the complaint states.

George McDermott, assistant division manager of the railroad, said the company has a positive solution.

"MONDAY NIGHT, we will be testing a new parking arrangement, moving the engines further down the tracks toward town. This will move the noise away from the troubled area. We will be working right with Mr. Lindahl, using the noise meters. We are going to try and simulate the same conditions that are causing the noise problem. We think this will be the solution. I don't know why we didn't think of this before," McDermott said.

Residents complain that the noise reaches its peak in the summer when windows are open. Engines starting about 5:30 a.m. waken sleeping homeowners, Mrs. Schliep said.

"In the spring of 1970 I called the railroad and got the runaround. I talked to aldermen and the mayor who said the noise wasn't unbearable."

Ald. Robert Hinde (4th) and Ald. Daniel Kisslinger (4th) both signed the petition.

Burglars ransack house trailer here

Burglars forced their way into a house trailer here and stole a color television, a radio, food, a pair of binoculars and 12 cartons of cigarettes valued at $580, said Des Plaines police Friday.

The owner, Theodore Wardzala, 1330 Rand Rd., was staying in a Skokie nursing home when his sister discovered the break-in on Thursday, police said.

Auto theft reported

Thieves stole a car Thursday owned by Glenn Neland, 1925 River Rd., said Des Plaines police.

Neland told police the car was taken from the parking lot of the building where he lived sometime after 7 p.m.

Martin cab firm seeks fare hike

A local taxicab company will seek city permission to raise cab fares from 50 to 60 cents per mile, according to Richard Vana, a spokesman for the Martin Cab Co., 1501 Miner St.

"The prices of gas have gone up so much and it's costing us more money to provide the service and maintain our equipment the way we'd like to," Vana said. The company currently has 15 cabs and serves Des Plaines and Palatine.

The proposed hike would also require approval of other local cab companies, who would also raise fares if the measure is approved.

The request will be referred to a committee at the city council's 8 p.m. meeting today.

Murder hearing slated this week

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled Thursday for Peter Mukite, on a murder charge in the Des Plaines shotgun slaying of Richard Bollacker.

Mukite, 21, 1823 W. Haddon Ave., Chicago, appeared Friday before Judge Marvin Peters in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court. He is being held without bail in Cook County Jail.

Bollacker's body was found in a wooded grove Thursday near Ballard and Rand roads in Des Plaines. He was shot in the right side of the head and right arm at close range.

MUKITE WAS arrested late Thursday by Des Plaines and Chicago police near the home of Richard Del Moro, who also is charged in the slaying. At the time of his arrest, Mukite was carrying identification belonging to his brother, Frank. Mukite — also known as Pete the Satan — later admitted his identity.

Mukite — a member of a near westside street gang known as the Playboys — offered no resistance, Chicago police said. The Playboys are a coalition of at least three other gangs — the Ventures, a Pulaski park group, and the Jousters.

Mukite, Del Moro and two other suspects were named in the killing by 16-year-old Cindy Graf, Bollacker's girlfriend.

Miss Graf and Bollacker reportedly told the four persons wanted in the murder that they planned to marry, starting an argument that led to the slaying. Miss Graf was beaten and left for dead after the attackers ran out of shotgun shells.

SHE WAS TAKEN to Holy Family Hospital where she was reported in good condition after head wounds requiring 43 stitches. She later was moved to an undisclosed location and remained under police guard.

Police pushed an area-wide search over the weekend for the three other persons also charged in the shooting. Police investigators were combing the Central Avenue and Division Street area where the Playboys congregate.

Police described Del Moro as about 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 110 pounds. Del Moro's police record includes juvenile arrests and a charge of aggravated assault with a gun in March 1971.

The two remaining suspects are:

• John Murphy, 17, also of Chicago. Police said Murphy is about 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 140 pounds with blue eyes and blond hair.

• A 16-year-old unnamed Oak Park girl.

Addresses of the suspects were not released.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

An Israeli diplomat was shot to death outside his home in Chevy Chase, an affluent Washington D.C. suburb, by an unknown assailant firing in the dark and quiet of early yesterday morning. Authorities reported no immediate suspects or firm evidence of terrorism, but the U.S. promised "every effort to find the perpetrators of this crime." Col. Yosef Alon, 44, deputy military attache at the Israeli embassy, was shot five times and died instantly as he and his wife were coming home from a party.

Secy. of State William P. Rogers headed for a 35-nation European security conference in Helsinki, carrying U.S. hopes for future big power invasions of smaller countries and to improve the flow of people and information between East and West. The conference, heavily promoted by the Soviet Union, opens tomorrow. Deputies will get down to hard bargaining next fall in Geneva and the work probably will not be finished until next spring.

Thousands of unburied coffins piled up at strike-bound cemeteries, an unprecedented lawyers strike loomed, and contracts for nearly 200,000 city employes expired in this labor-besieged city — New York. In addition, a hospital strike continued in Brooklyn and food employes for one airline walked off their jobs at Kennedy Airport. Sam Cimaglia, head of the 1,700-member cemetery workers' union, is scheduled to appear before the State Court of Appeals in Albany today to plead that a lower court order demanding his men return to work is unconstitutional.

The state

A proposal to freeze local real estate taxes appeared dead when the Illinois House returned to work yesterday. Sponsor C. L. McCormick, R-Vienna, accused Gov. Daniel Walker and other Democrats of sabotaging the bill. Unresolved in the Senate was the fate of a $265 million Republican supplemental freeway program for fiscal 1974, part of the $1.5 billion appropriation for the Department of Transportation.

As the General Assembly struggled to end its session, both houses passed a Republican-sponsored bill which would cut the sales tax from 5 cents to 4.5 cents on the dollar. Gov. Daniel Walker's proposal to grant income tax exemptions died in the Senate.

The Illinois House yesterday gave Governor Walker a bill to raise the state minimum wage from the current $1.60 to $2.10 by Jan. 1, 1976. The vote was 129-4. The bill also raises the minimum wage for those under 18 years of age from $1.25 to $1.75 per hour by the same time.

The world

An American among the 79 persons injured in the crash of a Soviet jetliner Saturday was released from a hospital yesterday. Six other persons remained hospitalized from the crash which killed eight persons, including five children. Experts meanwhile examined the flight recorder of the Aeroflot TU134 jet. Jordanian Transport Minister Nadim El-Zarou said the main task of the crash investigation committee will be to determine why the pilot could not attain sufficient altitude to take off.

A British soldier, Pvt. Reginald Roberts, was shot to death by a marksman in Belfast as Northern Ireland's violence continued. Roberts had marked his 25th birthday yesterday. His wife was in labor with their first child. He died a few hours after receiving a "happy birthday" call from his wife.

At congressional hearing:

FAA blamed for O'Hare pollution

by KAREN BLECHA

Officials and residents of the Northwest suburbs Saturday blamed the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and its lack of tight controls over commercial airlines for much of the noise pollution from O'Hare Airport.

In return, FAA officials, airline representatives and airplane pilots gave residents little hope that relief from O'Hare airplane noise would come in the near future or even in five years. Several officials indicated total noise relief may be impossible.

The statements were made during seven hours of testimony at an ad hoc congressional hearing on aircraft noise pollution and abatement. The hearing, at Maine South High School in Park Ridge, was called by U.S. Rep. Samuel Young, R-10th, a member of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce which considers legislative matters dealing with air transportation. Throughout the testimony Young listened intently to the witnesses, asked them questions and took notes.

Young said he will turn over records of the testimony to the FAA which later in the year will hold public hearings on proposed noise pollution regulations. The FAA will make the regulations based on recommendations of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) which is conducting a study of noise pollution with results due in July.

WITNESSES testifying at the hearing include Mayor Herbert Behrel of Des Plaines, Mayor Martin Butler of Park Ridge, representatives of the National Organization to Insure a Sound-controlled Environment (NOISE), the Illinois Dept. of Aeronautics, FAA, EPA, the Air Transport Association of America (ATA) and the Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA).

Philip Lindahl, environmental officer for Des Plaines, said he needed information on any proposed expansion at O'Hare. However, no one was able to give him an answer. No representative came from the Chicago Department of Aviation which operates O'Hare and officials did not send a statement as promised.

About 50 people of an audience of 200 stayed until the end of the hearings. Most of the residents were from Des Plaines and Park Ridge. Many were middle-aged or older and had bought their homes near the airport before O'Hare was built.

The two mayors opened the hearing. Butler ctiticized the FAA and Behrel echoed those sentiments.

"OFFICIALS AT the local level have come to recognize that it is unrealistic to expect the FAA to be concerned about and considerate of environmental problems. This is because the FAA has its primary loyalty to the industry to which it is oriented — that is the aircraft manufacturer, the airline operator and the airport operator. The FAA has established a lengthy track record over the years of being unresponsive to environmental requirements."

"If past history is any indication, we can expect the FAA to take a very conservative and industry-oriented position on EPA recommendations." Butler's statements were followed by applause from the audience.

Butler made three recommendations he asked Young to consider: ban any further expansion of O'Hare, create a federal agency separate from the FAA with power to control the construction, operation and expansion of all airports; and to federally regulate the use of the airport so as to confine flights to daily hours.

Behrel said he was encouraged that the EPA will make recommendations for noise regulations.

"I admit there have been some small improvements in the noise over the year — the DC10 and the L1011, the quieter engines. But what about the 727 and the 707?" In downtown Des Plaines, in the heart of the city, not just in the peripheral areas, — you can't even sit in the backyard and enjoy a barbecue."

LOYD HINTON, co-executive director of NOISE, told Young that "the airline industry insisting that noise controls would kill hundreds of people or bring a demise to the industry is a smoke-blowing exercise." He slammed the FAA and quoted a variety of government reports as his evidence to his claim that "over the years the FAA has not been doing its jobs."

Hinton's statements were also met with applause from the audience.

FAA officials testified there were two partial solutions to the noise problem that are now being tested: a two-segment landing approach which keeps the aircraft higher off the ground for a longer period of time, and retrofitting, or soundproofing existing airplane engines such as the 707 and the 727.

Robert Swanson, planner in the FAA Washington office, said once the retrofitting technique is mastered it will take time and money to soundproof existing aircraft. He estimated it would cost $800 million to retrofit the United States commercial fleet.

Swanson also stressed that the two-segment approach, which requires sensitive landing equipment such as a glidescope, is only in the experimental stage. O'Hare Airport as yet has not purchased any of the equipment needed for such an approach.

"WE TRY TO keep the planes as high as possible as long as we can," said Lester Case, an FAA planning officer formerly in the FAA's Chicago division. "But from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. there is little available that can be done for noise abatement."

He said after 10 p.m. air controllers at O'Hare try to route the airplanes over fields, the Northwest Tollway or the Kennedy Expressway and away from the most populated areas.

"We know our noise abatement is not perfect. And as long as we have 1,800 to 2,000 planes coming into O'Hare every day we're going to have a noise problem. In the next year you can expect very little in the way of noise reduction. The improvement will come when the airlines buy more of the DC-10's, the L1011's and the 747's."

William Becker, representative of ATA, a trade association of all certified American air carriers, was even less optimistic about solutions to the problem.

"I can only see a solution if the airlines get federal funding to soundproof their engines. Some of the newer models won't solve the noise problem even if they meet the latest FAA standards for noise," Becker said.

John LeRoy, of the ALPA, said pilots were eager to reduce noise but not in exchange for safety.

"THE PROPER solution to noise problem is through engineering and land-use control," LeRoy said. "I think the FAA should set higher standards. We have procedures we have to use at the Washington Airport (Dulles) that we don't use anywhere else and those people in Washington have a quieter environment than you do."

Possible solutions that came out at the hearing included a tax on air plane tickets to help pay for engine soundproofing; a general airline tax on the public; and a national land-use policy that would restrict the use of land surrounding airports from being used as residential. The mayors at the hearing protested a national land-use policy, saying they feared it would take away local zoning control.

Only a few residents testified during the hearing, although many shouted questions and comments from the audience. One Park Ridge man wanted to know why he hadn't heard any airplanes all day.

"I hear them every Saturday and Sunday," he said. "Do you think the congressional hearing has anything to do with it?"

THE ROAR OF JET engines is a familiar sound to residents in the Northwest suburbs. Saturday residents and local officials registered complaints about noise from O'Hare International Airport during congressional hearings in Park Ridge.

Secretariat: a race horse to remember

moved back and the horses were off. Secretariat got a slow start but quickly moved up and ahead, and at the finish was striding away from the others. A yell went up when he crossed the finish line. Secretariat was the champ, just like everyone figured he would be.

Now there was tighter security. Policemen ringed the winner's circle, shoving back photographers who came too close to the horse. Spectators shoved together. And there was this little man in the midst of it all. He was talking to someone standing nearby, pointing to the horse. Presumably, now he was talking about superhorse and the special race and whether the soon-to-be retired colt was really as good as everyone believed.

And then the horse was gone. There were two more races but thousands began to file out the gates.

They were going home to tell their friends they had seen Secretariat, 1972 Horse of the Year, 1973 Triple Crown Winner and a $6 million horse that would be out to pasture by Christmas, never to race again.

ACCESS will coordinate hospital emergency care

A comprehensive plan to ensure emergency victims are treated at hospitals which provide the services needed will go into effect this month.

Called ACCESS, Areawide Coordinating Comprehensive Emergency Services System, the plan is designed to comply with state laws requiring hospitals to coordinate their emergency care efforts.

Details of the plan will be announced later this week but it is expected not to have much of an effect on Northwest suburban hospitals. Services provided at hospitals here are considered by experts to be among the best in the state and there is continuous cooperation between them now.

All hospitals in the state are involved in the plan which would have most of its impact in downstate communities where hospitals are isolated from each other.

THE 13 HOSPITALS in the northwest and north suburbs are to be divided into four zones. Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights and Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village will be in the west zone. Holy Family and Forest Hospitals, both in Des Plaines, and Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge will be included in the central zone.

The plan calls for hospitals to be designated in three categories: comprehensive, basic and standby. Each of the hospitals in the Northwest suburbs is listed as having comprehensive coverage, that is, they have at least one licensed physician on duty in the emergency rooms at all times and they can respond in emergencies with medical expertise in all major fields.

Under the plan, persons needing emergency treatment are to be taken to the hospital which is equipped to handle their cases. That includes all hospitals in this area.

There will be 51 such plans in Illinois set up by the joint cooperation of the North Suburban Association for Health Resources and the Illinois Department of Public Health.

Herald publisher named to panel

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. Dan Walker has announced his appointment of Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor and publisher, as member of the new Illinois Health Facilities Authority.

The authority is a seven-member public body created by the 1972 legislature to provide an alternate means for financing construction of needed hospital and other health care facilities in Illinois.

The appointment to the non-salaried position must be confirmed by the state Senate.

Hayes, 42, is a graduate of Wittenberg University and received an M.S. in Journalism degree from Northwestern University. He joined Paddock Publications as a Herald reporter in 1954, advancing to editor-in-chief in 1968 and publisher in 1971.

He has been active in numerous professional, civic and social service activities. Hayes currently serves as Advisory Board chairman for the Community Counseling Center, family service agency for Northwest suburbs. He lives at 1 N. Chestnut Ave., Arlington Heights.

From Des Plaines to Lake Michigan

It will be a long trip by wheelchair

by MIKE ZAREMBA

The distance from Des Plaines to Lake Michigan is 15 miles. A long trip — especially in a wheelchair.

Sam Turpin of Des Plaines and a friend plan to conquer that road July 4 to prove that they're serious about competing in the International Paralympics in England.

The 15-mile wheelchair trip could pave the way to $300 in expenses for the England competition.

The easiest way to get the money would be to ask for donations. But they're not going to do that. It would be too easy. Sam and his friend Don Van Dello of Evanston, want to show people they're willing to work for travel money.

THERE ARE 'Hikes for Hunger' and 'Bike-athons' for the American Cancer Society. Sam figured — why not. Now there is a 'Wheelchair-Push-athon.'

Sam has spent the last week, after work, talking to businessmen in Des Plaines and asking for sponsors. He's asking his friends and anyone else who might be interested in helping.

"Instead of going out and just asking for donations I wanted to show people this is a worthwhile cause. I wanted to do something to prove to them I'm serious," Sam said.

And that is exactly what he is doing because of the 4th of July — a holiday, a day of parades, a day of fireworks, parties and beer-drinking — Sam and Don will push their wheelchairs over 15 miles of sidewalks.

"It's not going to be easy. We're working on a route and I think we can use mostly sidewalks. I'm afraid if we go on the streets, we could get hit. One way or another, we're going to do it."

Sam and Don have traveled a long, hard road to get this chance to go to the International Paralympics. It didn't happen overnight.

FIRST THERE was Moline, Ill., a regional conference. Sam's specialty is the pentathlon, a five-event competition involving — archery, racing, javelin, swimming and the shot-put.

Then there was New York, the statewide meet, where 350 regional finalists competed for the 35 positions to represent the United States. When it was all over; Sam and Don were among the 35.

Sam has been through this before. Two years ago, in the Pan-American Paralympics, Sam won two gold medals for the United States. One was in basketball and the other in weightlifting. Sam Turpin bench pressed 265 pounds.

He didn't become involved in sports until four years ago. He was 22 and working at United Air Lines as a statistical analyst. Someone asked him if he would like to play basketball.

"I looked at this guy and thought he was crazy," Sam said. "He invited me to a wheelchair basketball league game in Chicago. I tried out for the team and have been a member of the Chicago Sidewinders for four years now. We finished second in the nation last year."

Sam said he really wasn't interested in sports until he met up with the Chicago Sidewinders. He was struck down by polio when he was 22 months old.

"I NEVER really played in any sports before and I didn't know what I was missing. A guy can go out and play basketball anytime, but when you're in a wheelchair, it's different. When you play with the team you're not limited. It's a good way to stay in shape."

Sam also is a newlywed. He's been married nine months. "I'm glad my wife likes this stuff. The basketball season is over. That was only two nights a week practice, but with the track and field season, practice is three nights a week. Some of the other guys do get hassled now and then by their wives. I guess I'm lucky," Sam said.

Sam and Don will be starting at 7:30 a.m., July 4 on the corner of Prairie and Lee streets in Des Plaines. They said they want to get an early start. They don't expect a real big turnout or anything, since it will be a holiday. They are determined to make the whole 15 miles. In a few weeks they will be in England, representing the United States.

Another guy, in a wheelchair, is going with them. He said he is going along, "just for the exercise."

Anyone interested can help these guys out. A check can be made out to Chicagoland Wheelchair Sports Inc. Sam Turpin lives at 400 W. Touhy in Des Plaines. Don Vandello, Sam's partner, lives at 2516 Ridgeway in Evanston. Anything would help, he said.

WHEELCHAIR ATHLETE Sam Turpin of Des Plaines will compete in the International Paralympics to be held in England next week. Archery is one of his many sports. Turpin will wheelchair from Des Plaines to Lake Michigan seeking sponsors to help pay his $300 trip to England.

All-or-nothing project

July zoning OK seen for Superblock

Downtown redevelopment is an all-or-nothing project, Superblock backers told the Des Plaines City Council last week.

"Either we make it the way we presented it, or it is not their intent to lend us the money," architect Dennis Stevens said during the council's final Superblock committee of the whole meeting.

Aldermen are expected to approve zoning for the shopping mall-office building-parking project in July. The council authorized City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi two weeks ago to prepare an ordinance authorizing the $11 million construction.

Council members pushed for a balancing of city costs and anticipated tax revenue at the meeting Thursday.

Stevens predicted that the two-story shopping mall will increase retail sales here $8 million a year. About $80,000 will be received by the city.

REAL ESTATE taxes should increase $250,000 a year, Stevens said. Local schools would receive about $165,000 and the city share would be $25,000.

"Lenders have strict criteria and must have a certain return," Stevens said. Backers of the building will receive "a little less than 10 per cent" for investment, but "lenders look more for 12 per cent."

Rent will be $7.25 to $7.50 per square foot for about 180,000 square feet of office space and $7 per square foot for 180,000 square ft. of retail space.

Redevelopment officials sought financing and advice from insurance firm's and large trust funds in Boston, Hartford and New York before completing final plans, Stevens said. "If we take off any floor area we'd have to increase the rents which would put us out of the economic market."

"I DON'T LIKE the idea of such a high building," Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th) said. "I'm sure it won't be the last" building of similar height.

The height "is not an arbitrary number. It's based on land value that was given and the required number of revenue producing square feet," Stevens said.

"It appears we're going to do (the 10-story office) building in 180 feet," Stevens said. "A penthouse may add 15 feet. We don't want to go one foot higher than we must."

Stevens said twin-office tower buildings were rejected by East Coast financiers.

Stevens said that city and Cook County fire codes "more than adequately protect" the building. "Whatever is required, we will install."

"Do you have the equipment to get to the top floor?" Ald. George Olen (2nd) asked Fire Chief Arthur Haag.

"NO EQUIPMENT can reach to 120 feet," Haag said. "It'a tougher to fight fires in buildings over 75 feet."

"If they decide they need more fire masks for a bigger building, we'll buy them," Mayor Herbert Behrel told 11 aldermen attending the meeting.

The developer's petition would require the city to vacate part of Center Street for a shopping walkway, to widen Prairie, to construct nearly 750 parking spaces including a multi-tier garage and to approve a 200-foot building height.

"The theory is that the city will vacate Center for the mall. The square foot value of Center will be traded for the Catholic church property," Behrel said. The land swap for former St. Mary's Church land would allow construction of 250 controversial, metered parking spaces near Prairie and Pearson.

THE ZONING board and plan commission recommended last month that the proposed multi-level garage be located on the Prairie-Pearson corner. The council rejected the recommendation and voted to build the garage on the original Ellinwood site across from superblock.

Despite parking garage construction, the project will be 272 spaces short of city code requirements, Ald. Gerald Meyer (7th) said. The developers will rent more than 400 spaces in the garage to meet office parking requirements.

The developers will not lease or construct 272 spaces to meet the city's retail parking requirement. And, the petitioners have asked the council to waive more than $435,000 required to offset the lack of parking.

"Why should the city waiver that entire amount of money?" Meyer asked.

"That's not waiving anything," Behrel said.

"The money is not available," Meyer said.

"You're both right," DiLeonardi said. If the city did not issue revenue bonds to build the downtown parking, "the developer would have to build the parking. The city puts up front money to build the lots, sells bonds and gets the money back over a number of years."

Citizens Co. employes back to work

Citizens Utility Co. maintenance men and plant operators were back on the job Friday, after a 21-day strike over wages.

The 30 employes of the Citizens Utility Employes Union won a two-year contract, providing an 8 per cent wage hike this year and a 7 per cent hike next year. It was the first contract between the union and the utility company. The union was formed last November.

John Nobel, attorney for Citizens, said the settlement was above the current 5½ per cent federal wage guidelines for three reasons. Most importantly, he said, it was the minimum raise the employes would accept. But Nobel said a survey showed Citizens' employe wages were slightly below those paid by other area utility companies and it was the first raise obtained by the workers since December, 1971. The workers also got an additional paid holiday.

Nobel said disagreement over medical insurance was mainly the result of misunderstandings and the same procedure will be followed.

The pay hike was made retroactive to May 1.

The company provides water and sewer service to about 3,000 homes and businesses in Mount Prospect and Des Plaines. It also serves unincorporated areas in Des Plaines. No interruptions in service were reported during the strike.

BB shooting spree

Vandals caused an estimated $2,000 damage to the United Steel Co., 129 Rawls, after a BB shooting spree early Wednesday, said Des Plaines police.

A company spokesman told police the vandals shot out eight large windows, several smaller ones and a glass door.

Test of solicitation ordinance called off

A Chicago environmental group called off a planned court test of Des Plaines' solicitation ordinance Friday.

The Citizens for Better Environment are expected to file court challenges to solicitation ordinances in two south suburban communities this week.

CBE — not to be confused with the Citizens' Action Committee — canvassed Des Plaines door-to-door last week seeking $3 to $5 contributions.

The group did not have a permit to solicit here.

"We picked seven communities that we might go to court with. Des Plaines was one of them," Mark Anderson, CBE executive director, told the Herald Friday.

"MUNICIPALITIES do not have the right to prohibit solicitation," Anderson said. "It's been well-tested." Park Ridge lost a 1971 U. S. Supreme Court decision to regulate solicitation, he said.

CBE solicitors walked Des Plaines Tuesday through Thursday with "the intention of getting arrested so we could prosecute."

No CBE solicitors were arrested here. Mayor Herbert Behrel ordered police to use a "kid gloves" approach and to "put them in their cars and tell them to leave town."

Des Plaines police Wednesday picked up James Young, thinking he was a CBE solicitor. Young was working as a field manager for the Citizens' Action Program (CAP).

CAP received city council permission to solicit here recently and started a city-wide canvass last Monday. The fund and petition drive will continue through July 15.

Anderson complained that Des Plaines is "one city that is preventing us from complying with their ordinance." CBE applied "three or four times . . . formally, in writing to the mayor in registered letters. We've done whatever we could."

BEHREL ORIGINALLY denied a CBE request to solicit here in November, 1971. Another request was denied in June, 1972 and the city council said "no" in October, 1972.

The group also has been denied entrance in Schaumburg, Lombard, LaGrange, Oak Lawn and Park Ridge. Hoffman Estates trustees were recently told by their attorney that they had no power to ban the drive.

CAP experienced similar difficulty in obtaining a permit here. CAP's license request prompted objection by Behrel and was studied by the city council for more than a month. The solicitation was to start May 11.

"It's funny," Anderson said. "We deal only in pollution and CAP has a much broader base. We're tax exempt and they're not.

"The mayor has a funny attitude on pollution. It's like pollution will avoid Des Plaines," Anderson said.

Teachers discuss past era

Retiring school employes share memories

by REGINA OEHLER

All things must change, said the poet Longfellow.

Communities change, schools change and many of the long established faces within the schools change each year.

This year, six long-time faculty members in Des Plaines schools are retiring. They shared some of their memories of a past era with the Herald.

Florence Gembicki has taught kindergarten at Forest School for the last 15 years. Kindergarten has changed, she said.

"Most of all, there's a great deal more academic work done in kindergarten now," she said. Fifteen or 16 years ago, that was frowned upon, she added; children went to kindergarten to learn behavior and how to get along with each other.

THEY DID little, if any, reading or writing. School districts discouraged the use of workbooks. Today, they automatically hand out workbooks to kindergarten students, she said.

Mrs. Gembicki said the community is much more academically orientated now than it was 15 years ago. Parents simply assume their children will continue on to colleges and universities. "Parents are even worried about this in kindergarten," she said.

Teaching methods have changed, too. "Now every school happens to have a library," Mrs. Gembicki said. Students, even kindergarten children, can go into the library to read and use the small viewing machines or the listening devices.

"These things have all come during the time I've been teaching," she said. This year, Mrs. Gembicki added, she has a lot of kids that can read and two of her students use the library on their own.

ANOTHER, PERHAPS more important change was testing students starting kindergarten for motor deficiencies. Children may have hearing, sight or balancing problems that would interfere with classwork.

Today students are being tested for these problems and there are special classes set up to help the children learn to compensate for their difficulties instead of failing classes.

"This has all been quite a change," Mrs. Gembicki said. Formerly, she said, the kindergarten teacher was on her own with the children, now she's part of a team.

Besides having taught over 800 children in the 15 years she's been in the district, Mrs. Gembicki also piloted the Motor Facilitation Program testing coordination in kindergarten and served as secretary of the Des Plaines Benefit Association for 6 years.

Music instruction has changed completely, said Grace Peacock, who has taught instrumental music for Dist. 62 for 18 years. "We have a lot more children interested in playing," she said.

String instruments are much more popular today, she said, and there are many more orchestras than there were 18 years ago. Teaching methods have changed, she added, but fundamentally, students are still the same. "They were pretty bright 18 years ago, and they're still pretty sharp," she said.

MISS PEACOCK taught at Algonquin, Forest and West schools. Recently, she received a junior high school service award from the University of Illinois, one of five given in the state.

Students just aren't like they used to be, according to Virginia Snyder, French and Latin teacher at Maine East who is retiring after 36 years of teaching.

"The schools reflect our society," she said. "There is a lot more permissiveness and freedom of action and dress everywhere."

She said that today's students are much more used to luxuries. Often, both parents, as well as the students, work. Teenagers usually have their own televisions, radios and record players, she said.

This makes them hyper-active. "They can't concentrate on the lesson; they want to be entertained; they want continued change," she said. "They are so easily distracted."

STUDENTS ARE freer and more independent. "They don't want to be told what to do." Thirty years ago students would listen to the teacher. "They'd always do what they were told," she said. "They were always obedient. No kid would refuse to do what was told."

In a way, the change isn't all bad. Students used to follow the teacher. Now, she said, there is more individuality and students are more uninhibited; more creative.

"They have ideas, opinions and they seem to pick up a lot without studying. I'm sometimes amazed at what they know," Miss Snyder said. She said much of this knowledge probably comes from television.

Miss Snyder has traveled extensively in Europe, and studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and the American Academy in Rome.

"WHEN I CAME to Maine Township there were 1,500 students and 80 teachers," said Anne Lauterbach, English teacher at Maine West. She has been in the district for 30 years.

Today, Maine Township has four high schools, 680 teachers and 11,800 students.

Mrs. Lauterbach started teaching during World War II, when much of Des Plaines was still farmland. She remembers guinea hens walking through the parking lot at Maine East. The students in the agricultural course, she said, had a big garden in back of the school.

A lot of the produce from that garden was used in the cafeteria. The cooks would can their own vegetables, and the rest of the foodstuff was sold to the community.

Then the community started expanding. New people moved into the area, escaping from the city. For a time, she said, the district was on a split schedule — half the students would attend classes in the mornings; the rest would go in the afternoons.

STUDENTS LOOK a lot different, but basically, they are the same. "It's more of an external than internal change," she said. There are still good students, bad students, interested students and bored students.

One of the biggest differences between 1973 and 1943 was World War II, said Mrs. Lauterbach. "Those were serious years," she added. Many of the students had outside jobs; others could look forward to being drafted after they finished schools.

"Some even left before they were finished," she added. She remembered one "D" student who joined the service before finishing high school. When he returned, he made straight "A's".

It could not be compared with the Vietnam War, she said. World War II was a fight for protection and for life, Mrs. Lauterbach explained, and eventually, it ended. In Vietnam, "we didn't know what we were fighting for."

STUDENTS TODAY, though basically the same as before, are more outspoken. "They are more apt to say what they think and feel," she added.

The "uniform" changes, she said. Each generation has their look. One generation wore bobby socks and saddle shoes; another wears mini skirts and jeans.

Activities have changed a great deal, said Mrs. Fanibel Robson, calendar coordinator for Maine East. She has worked with the school's activity calender for the last 17 years.

In the past, she said, there used to be many "after dances." Students would use the multi-purpose room and have a band or record player for dances following basketball games.

Now there are very few dances scheduled. They're almost completely limited to school formals.

HIGH SCHOOL students used to have quite a few homeroom parties, she said. The Key Club, the Boy's Club and the Girl's Club used to be very large. All three were service clubs that no longer exist.

The emphasis has changed from service clubs to academic clubs, Mrs. Robson said. There are language clubs, math clubs, science clubs and reading clubs. Most of these are smaller.

"The kids were more involved in school — it was more fun," she said about the past. "School was their social life; it isn't any more."

They seem to have more to do outside the school, she added.

Anti-abortion hospital faulted

by JOANN VAN WYE

Northwest Community Hospital is shirking its responsibility as a community hospital with the decision not to perform abortions on demand, according to State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights.

"For our local hospital to make this kind of decision is very regrettable. They are responding to a small minority and this minority is trying to press their views on the rest of the population," said Mrs. Chapman when she learned the board of directors at the Arlington Heights hospital had voted against performing abortions on demand last week.

While Mrs. Chapman criticized the board's decision, advocates of keeping abortion out of Northwest Community Hospital hailed the board's decision.

"I am very jubilant," said Fran Gillis, president of the Society for the Preservation of Human Dignity (PhD). "We don't want this type of thing in our community. It is our hospital and it is here to protect and save lives."

MARCY SNEAD, president of the Right to Life group, breathed a sigh of relief when she learned of the decision. Mrs. Snead and a member of the medical staff had made a presentation to the board against abortion when the matter was first being considered several months ago. "The things we said apparently had some affect on them," she said.

Both anti-abortion groups had conducted a strong letter writing campaign to hospital administrators arguing against abortion.

Mrs. Chapman said surveys she took of the third district in 1971 indicated public opinion in the area was running 2 to 1 in favor of making abortion a question to be decided between the pregnant woman and her doctor. She said she had sent a copy of the results of her survey to Malcolm MacCoun, hospital president.

"Those people who want to exercise their own free choice and utilize this legal medical procedure should have this option and those doctors who would like to perform abortions should have that opportunity in a community hospital," said Mrs. Chapman, a women's right's advocate.

"THE HOSPITAL is not responding to the community will. Those of us who rang doorbells and canvassed with dedication thought we were raising money for a community hospital but apparently we were wrong."

MacCoun said the board's decision not to alter its present abortion policy was influenced by a need to conserve the resources of the hospital for programs with pressing needs and the inability of the Illinois General Assembly to replace the former statute which was not consistent with the Supreme Court's ruling.

"It sounds like they are looking for excuses," said Mrs. Chapman. "Abortion is a procedure which is to be permitted under the U.S. Constitution and it is not one that requires special kinds of equipment. Any hospital which has a maternity ward can easily perform abortions."

Oakton enrollment largest in 3 summers

Oakton Community College surpassed its projected summer enrollment by more than 300 students, with 2,100 students attending both day and evening classes. This is the largest summer session enrollment in Oakton's three year history.

Summer classes end on Aug. 9. Fall semester orientation begins Aug. 20 and classes start on Aug. 27. For information on admission to Oakton this fall, contact the Office of Admissions, 967-5120, ext. 392 or 393.

Read — Pass It On!

Now is the time to sign up for the Summer Reading Program at the Des Plaines Public Library Children's Room. There is something to interest youngsters of all ages:

The preschool storytime at 11 a.m. every Thursday is very popular.

Grade school children (K through 6) who register for the Summer Reading Club are given a membership card which entitles them to come to Tuesday or Wednesday programs at 3:30 p.m. in the children's room. There will be a folk tales, films, hobby show, pet show, ond talent show. Club members write their names on paper leaves which grow on a paper tree, and the more names, the bigger the tree.

Junior high (6,7,8) book discussion group meets each Thursday at 3:30 p.m. Paperback copies of books to be discussed may be picked up at the Library.

THE HANDCRAFTED articles currently being displayed at the Des Plaines Public Library were created by Dorrie Anderson, owner of Sugar and Spice, and Helen Larsen, who teaches in the craft shop. They have both taught adult evening classes at Maine West — "Decoupage" by Mrs. Anderson and "Eggeury of the fashion of Faberge" by Mrs. Larsen.

The examples of decoupage and repousse art are specialties of Mrs. Anderson; while Mrs. Larsen is the expert in eggery and the drying of flowers which retain their natural appearance of color and flexibility. Both have collaborated on the conservation boxes. The painted stone sculptures and the carved appleheads were made by Dr. Erwin Angres who has perfected his own technique for carving and preserving the doll heads.

Mrs. Anderson opened the Sugar and Spice Shop three years ago. Everything in the entire shop is handcrafted in America. Classes in crafts are carried on continuously, not only for adults but for children, 6½ and over, who are taught all types of crafts geared to their particular level.

During the latter part of July, there will be an exhibit in the shop of crafts made by students from both the children's and adult's classes.

Center for mildly retarded to open by September

The Clearbrook - Center of Rolling Meadows will open its new community living quarters for mildly retarded adults in the convent building at Our Lady of the Wayside Catholic Church in Arlington Heights this week.

About 10 mildly retarded adults are expected to move into the living quarters tomorrow or Wednesday, a Clearbrook spokesman said last week. By September, 20 young adults will be staying in the former convent building.

The live-in quarters at Wayside are the first such facility for mildly retarded persons in the Northwest area.

Since permission to use the building was granted by the Arlington Heights Village Board in January, Clearbrook has been renovating the building at 432 S. Mitchell Ave. About $15,000 has been spent on the structure originally built to house 27 nuns.

A fire alarm system has been installed along with other fire safety modifications needed to meet state and village fire codes, the spokesman said.

Clearbrook is licensed by the Illinois Department of Public Health to operate the community living facility which must pass inspection by both state and village fire marshals.

IT HAS A three-year lease for use of the building at an annual rent of $12,000. After two years, the center has agreed to provide the village with a written evaluation of the live-in facility.

Boarders will be supervised by "house parents," a married couple living in the building, as well as two assistant house parents or a part-time recreation director who will be available on weekends and in the morning and evening hours.

All of the residents are employed, either at Clearbrook's sheltered workshop in Elk Grove Village or at private jobs in the community, the spokesman said.

The purpose of the live-in center is to give moderately and mildly retarded adults experience in semi-independent living in order that some of them may eventually move into their own apartment.

Men and women at the facility are adults over 18 years of age. All boarders are ambulatory and must either be current or former residents of the Northwest suburban area or be enrolled at a state institution or school.

RESIDENTS WILL be trained in areas of personal grooming, socialization and communication, management of food, clothing, finances and transportation, vocational training, community services and leisure time activities.

The estimated cost per tenant is $396 per month and will be paid by the state. In addition, persons employed and earning more than $50 a month are responsible for a proportionate amount for room and board.

Establishment of the live-in center was opposed by some residents in the vicinity of the Wayside convent. Other residents, however, said they supported the new use for the building.

Last year the convent building was occupied by only seven nuns and would have been completely empty by the start of the next school year, the church said.

Legal 'foes' to join fight against municipal problems

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Cook County assistant state's attorneys and municipal attorneys often are on opposite sides of the fence in courtroom zoning battles.

But despite the history of combat, the two groups of lawyers may soon be joining forces to battle developers, polluters and absentee landlords.

Four assistant state's attorneys met last week with municipal officials from communities in the circuit court system's Second Municipal District.

The meeting, headed by Sheldon Gardner, chief of the civil division in the state's attorney's office, was aimed at increased cooperation between municipalities and the county.

CALLING FOR a "partnership," Gardner told officials from Northwest and North Shore suburbs that his office wants to open the lines of communication.

Even in cases where the state's attorney's office represents the county in a suit brought by a municipality, the goal of both isdes should be to present the best case possible to get a fair decision Gardner said.

Officials from Wheeling, Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows attended the meeting along with North Shore officials and representatives of the Metropolitan Sanitary District, the Prospect Heights Improvement Association, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

Gardner suggested to the local officials that the county and an individual municipality might be able to enter into a cooperative agreement under the new Illinois Constitution "instead of squabbling over jurisdiction."

WHEN ONE LOCAL official expressed interest in a special housing and zoning court for the north suburbs, Gardner said his office would be willing to go with local officials to Second Municipal District presiding Judge Harold W. Sullivan to ask that all housing and zoning cases be assigned to one judge at a set time each week. The official noted that most local ordinance zoning and housing cases in suburban courtrooms are now sandwiched between traffic cases and many associate judges have little background in housing or zoning law.

Other assistant state's attorneys who spoke at the meeting included Leonard Foster, head of the housing unit; Melvin Reiff, head of the pollution unit, and Jerome Schain, head of the building and zoning unit.

Foster told the suburban officials that his office uses both civil and criminal remedies to combat problems with substandard housing.

In almost all suburbs, "there is rental property that is not fit to live in," Foster said.

The crime of criminal housing management — allowing property to become so deteriorated that it harms public health and safety — carries penalties of up to one year in jail and $1,000 fine or both, he said.

FROM THE CIVIL suit approach, the state's attorney's office becomes involved in cases where the Cook County Department of Public Aid withholds rent payment from landlords for substandard housing.

Also, he said, the county can seek to rid a community of a vacant and abandoned building under public nuisance laws.

He offered help to local officials in developing building codes and housing ordinances. "I view my function as a problem solver," he said.

Reiff said his unit both represents Cook County government as a client and represents the people of the county in suits to abate pollution.

THE COUNTY IS just getting into suits under its new noise pollution ordinance, he said, and is particularly interested in helping villages with nuisance cases such as odor complaints, and land and water pollution problems.

He noted the state's attorney's office will sue to enforce federal and state pollution regulations as well as county ordinances.

He said county ordinances require environmental impact statements to be filed before operations can begin on certain types of industrial plants. "We want to work with you to prevent the pollution before it starts," he told village representatives.

Gardner and Schain said the state's attorney's office has been receiving "terrific cooperation" from the county zoning board of appeals and might be able to help villages who in the past have had little luck in influencing zoning decisions concerning property adjacent to their boundaries.

SCHAIN SAID his section spends a good deal of its time defending county zoning decisions against developers in court.

The office also files litigation to enforce county building and zoning codes in unincorporated areas and represents the county health department and conservation department, he said.

He said local municipalities would be invited to public hearings on the new county zoning ordinance once it is completed.

Trouble for Harper, mass transit

General Assembly stumbles to end of session

by BOB LAHEY

SPRINGFIELD — Meeting for the first time in history, in a July 1 session, the Illinois General Assembly stumbled toward adjournment yesterday in a session of which the major hallmark has been its failure to meet the problems of mass transportation in the Chicago metropolitan area.

The legislature did accomplish its constitutionally imposed roles of establishing a state board of education and a state board of elections, but the legislators appeared to be heading home without achachieving what had been considered the major aims of this session — mass transit and tax relief.

While the legislature — at the end of a grueling Saturday session which continued until dawn Sunday — had passed approximately 1,000 legislative measures, the House of Representatives still faced a massive work load yesterday.

THE SENATE had pared its calendar to about a dozen measures yesterday, but the House faced 128 legislative bills when it convened in mid-afternoon yesterday, about two hours after the session was due to begin.

House members were hoping for quick action on most of the bills — the House passed 113 bills on an "agreed list" in one roll call Thursday. But there was no assurance late yesterday that the house would not be required to return today, and possibly tomorrow.

Among dozens of measures still unsettled were a $1.6 million emergency appropriation for construction of a new field house at Harper College, and a bill which would allow residents of the Prospect Heights area to incorporate a municipality through referendum.

The Prospect Heights bill appeared headed for passage after clarification of language which would insure comprehensive boundaries to satisfy objections of surrounding communities.

AFTER WINNING approval of the House Appropriations Committee, however, the Harper College bill ran into trouble on the floor as representatives from other areas tried to get in on the state handout.

On Saturday, representative Roscoe Cunningham, R-Lawrenceville, circulated an amendment calling for identical $1.6 million grants to six junior colleges in his district.

Cunningham later withdrew that amendment, but representative Gerald Shea, D-Chicago, assistant majority leader and chief message-bearer for Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, attached another amendment for a $1.6 million grant to a junior college in his district.

In any event, the Harper College bill was seen by many as a sure target of veto by Governor Daniel Walker, who will have to override numerous Republican appropriations to stay within his proposed budget.

While most legislators concerned themselves this weekend with such special interest bills, the major item on the agenda, a regional transportation district, died a premature death.

THE MASS transit plan, at one point seemingly assured of passage, began to falter last week when Milton Pikarsky, Mayor Daley's appointed chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority, admitted to a senate committee that the CTA can probably remain alive through 1973 without additional state funding.

Without a need for CTA funds, Daley Democrats demonstrated little interest in finding a way to help mass transit systems in other areas.

Senator John Graham, R-Barrington, a member of the Senate Transportation Committee, predicted there would be no action on a regional transportation system until the CTA again runs out of funds and the legislature is called upon to "bail them out."

Senator David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and others expressed the opinion that Daley is not interested in any regional transportation plan which would remove "his absolute control over CTA."

Republicans disputed Goveror Walker's action late Saturday in signing a bill giving county governments the power to levy real estate taxes for their own mass transit systems — a plan which has been introduced in various forms by representative William A. Redmond, D-Bensenville, in every legislative session since 1959.

GRAHAM CALLED Walker's action a "political grandstand play" and said the five-cent-per-$100 property tax authorization was "grossly inadequate" for a mass transit system.

Graham said he expected the legislature to reconvene in October, whether or not called into special session by the governor, to attack the regional transportation question.

"I think a solution will be negotiated," said Graham, "when the mayor and the CTA start running out of money again.

"At any rate," he added, "you can't solve the problems of mass transit in three days," referring to the fact that the regional transportation proposal did not receive serious debate until two days before what was to have been the June 30 adjournment of the General Assembly.

Graham also defended the bill he sponsored creating a state board of elections, which provides for tie-breaking votes through a lottery. A compromise bill passed by the legislature and sent to Walker for his signature provides that a four-member board would settle deadlocked issues on state elections by drawing the name of one election commissioner from a hat, and then disqualifying him to vote on a particular issue.

GRAHAM HEATEDLY defended this proposal, which has been labeled the "hat trick" law by the media, and claimed that the board of elections bill repesents the first major election reform in the state since he became interested in the problem 14 years ago.

"This concept is not cast in iron," Graham said. "Other reform measures which I have seen passed in this legislature have been subsequently amended, and I fully expect that this will be, too."

Graham said that the so-called hat trick amendment provided the only vehicle by which he was able to secure the needed votes for the bill creating a state board of elections.

In other major action, advocates of a revision in the state school aid formula were able to pass a measure in the early morning hours Sunday which abolished, according to Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-Northfield, "discrimination between unit and dual school districts."

THE BILL, which would equalize state payments to dual districts with those received by unit school systems, was passed after initial failure in the Senate, when Senate sponsors agreed to a provision which would give downstate school districts the option of collecting state aid under the provisions which now exist in state law. In some districts, outside the Chicago area, failing school populations make the old state aid formula more attractive than that provided in the new law.

Before revision of the Illinois Constitution in 1970, the legislature was required to adjourn by midnight June 30. This requirement perennially resulted in the facade of stopping clocks in the state capital and continuing in session until the early morning hours of July 1.

In the memory of capital observers, however, the convening of the legislature in mid-afternoon yesterday was the first time that the General Assembly had ever met on July 1, and as one disgusted legislator expressed it, "We should have gone home on Jan. 11."

Will Watergate bug '74 voters?

by GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some political professionals have assumed that the ripple effects of Watergate could turn into a political tidal wave in the 1974 elections.

Now they're not sure at all and wonder whether the reaction won't be more like a Dead Sea with voters bugging out of any political activity.

There have been some signs of a developing attitude of a-plague-on-all-politics because of Watergate.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Republican party have dwindled since Watergate so that free tickets have had to be passed out to fill seats at political rallies.

Contributions to the Democratic party also fell off after a brief increase when Watergate revelations neared a peak earlier this year. Since then, the Democrats have made a major attempt to raise funds, using Watergate as an appeal.

Letters were sent out to a series of combined mailing lists appealing for funds to continue the civil suits against the Nixon campaign committee because of the Watergate break-in of the Democratic National headquarters. It is also too early to say whether that money drive can be labeled a success.

However, Democratic National Chairman Robert S. Strauss has expressed private and public concern that the most serious effect of Watergate may be to make people cop out on politics. He has cautioned Democrats against counting upon Watergate to carry the party's candidates to victory next year.

THE REVELATION that the White House kept a list of political enemies is a new factor adding to the concern of the political professionals. According to the testimony of John W. Dean III before the Senate Watergate Investigating Committee, people on the list were intended to be targets of government investigations, possibly including audits of their federal income tax returns. On the list were some big-time contributors to Democratic presidential candidates.

Some reacted to the news with amusement or with the facetious remark that they're happy to make the "Dean's" list. Privately and publicly some expressed resentment and outrage.

There also is the implication in the Dean statements that government contracts might be denied firms on the list. That could be a serious deterrent to future political contributions which, under the present law, must be made public in future election campaigns.

CHARLES W. COLSON, former White House aide, insists there were two lists: one of people who just shouldn't be invited to White House social occasions; the other, prepared by Dean himself, as vulnerable to political attack. Colson says his office prepared only the list of those subject to the social affairs boycott. On it, however, are some obvious names of people who wouldn't accept an invitation from President Nixon.

There is considerable question how much use was actually made of the enemy list. Documents presented by Dean indicate resistance by heads of the IRS to pressure from the White House to get the tax collection agency into the field of politics. But Dean also indicated the same could be accomplished with anonymous letters to field offices of the IRS. If somebody knowledgeable wrote the letter, a tax audit usually was the result.

At this stage of Watergate, the political consensus is that the 1974 elections will be fought out on strange and uncertain waters.

School desegregation rules relaxed to enable funding of five big cities

WASHINGTON (UPI — HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger Friday ordered a relaxation of civil rights requirements to enable at least five big city school systems to qualify for special federal school funds by mid-August.

The cities — Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and Oklahoma City — previously had been denied funds because of faculty assignments that did not meet the current requirements which Weinberger wants revised. "They are not in compliance under the regulation that is going to be rewritten," said a spokesman for the U.S. Office of Education.

IN A STATEMENT issued by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Weinberger said he wanted the rules rewritten "in order to provide more realistic standards for faculty assignments in large school districts."

He said the new rules would "give less weight to mechanistic numerical ratios and more to promising programs for dealing with the problems of desegrating districts."

Because these five cities and several others had not qualified for funds during the current fiscal year which ended Saturday, some $25 million in emergency school desegration aid will revert to the Treasury, an HEW education spokesman said. The unspent money is part of a grant's package of over $200 million to help schools desegragate.

"The chief difficulty some large city school districts have had in meeting the eligibility requirements as set in the original regulations was in the assignment of faculty members," HEW said. Basically the current regulation calls for the assignment of teachers without respect to race.

"SECRETARY Weinberger's verbal directive was to revise the regulations to permit a more flexible remedy for faculty assignment problems so that programs that the Office of Education certifies will make significant progress toward desegration can be funded."

Assignment Secretary for Education Sidney P. Marland Jr. said letters would be sent early next week to the five cities and to several others outlining plans to make funds available by mid-August for the next school year.

"I'm certain that we can make the necessary revisions in the guidelines and meet the other legal requirements in time to carry out the secretary's directives in this matter," Marland said.

Weinberger added, "We expect to be able to fund several cities by mid-August."

Motorists must clean windshields, rear view mirrors?

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The Illinois Senate passed and sent to Gov. Daniel Walker a bill that would require motorists to keep their windshields and rear view mirrors clear of snow and ice.

The bill, requested by the state police, passed 42-3 after being laughed down on an earlier try. Senators then suggested that motorists would be massacred trying to get out of their cars in freeway traffic to clean the windows.

Sen. Clifford Latherow, R-Carthage, said the state police would not be happy with the bill, saying it was meant to apply to rear windows, not rear view mirrors. Sen. Karl Berning, R-Deerfield, said, "Snow or ice would have a hard time getting on the rear view mirror if there is a roof on the car."

Shortage, freeze make 'gimmicks' a thing of the past

Gas station 'premiums' are no more

by DIANE STEFANOS

It used to be that motorists would continually increase their home collections of drinking glasses, beach balls and game cards each time they "filled 'er up" at a neighborhood gas station.

Because of the present gas shortage and freeze on gasoline prices, those days have become part of the American past.

"Gas station owners used to advertise gimmicks to attract patrons because of the constant gas price wars that went on between stations. With a gas shortage, why try to get people to buy gas when you don't have it?" said Richard Vance, owner of the Standard Station on Elmhurst and Dempster roads in Mount Prospect.

A SAMPLING OF Northwest suburban service station owners and employes indicates most owners can't afford the increase in business that comes with giving away or featuring gimmicks.

The amount of gasoline each station receives under the rationing program lasts most area station owners the full month, but only if they close early each day and close completely on Sundays.

"I'm glad that service stations aren't featuring gimmicks anymore. I didn't like them anyway because the only person who would lose was the dealer. He had to purchase the gimmicks and if he didn't sell enough gas to give them all away, he lost money," said Don Kretschmer, mechanic at Bob's 66 Station, 800 Elmhurst Rd., Des Plaines.

James Cichy, owner of Jim's Marathon Station, 19W.175 Devon Ave. in Elk Grove Village, agreed, saying he believes people would come into a gas station to buy gas no matter what the gimmick was.

"I think the price freeze on gas is the best thing that ever happened for us. The price wars to see who could battle for the lowest price were ridiculous, just like the gimmicks. Now gasoline prices are stabilized. I'm just happy to see people coming here for gasoline and service," he said.

ALTHOUGH THE gimmicks are gone, early closing hours for most gas stations have replaced old gimmick practice. According to most area gas station owners, most of their customers do not complain about the shortage or gas limitations because most stations are not having to limit the amount of gas they can sell to a customer.

"Most of the stations, it seems, are closing a few hours early each day and are closing all of Sunday to stay within their limited monthly allotment of gas they can sell instead of limiting that amount," said Dan Rutkowski, owner of Dan's Ranch Mart Mobil, Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads in Buffalo Grove.

HOWEVER, there are service stations, aside from those on the tollways, that are limiting amounts of gas sold per customer and are closing early each day.

"We began limiting our gas per customer this month. Limiting ten gallons of gas to a customer cuts down the amount of gas sold to the transients who pass through the area, and save more gas for residents. Our regular customers who live around here always come back on their way home from work or a couple of hours later to fill up on another 10 gallons of gas. We tell them to," said Mt. Prospect Standard station owner Richard Vance.

Vance added that his customers do not generally complain about the 10-gallon limitation of gas. He said most of his customers are filling up their cars on a half tank of gas when they come in.

"So people have gas in their cars when they come in. They just keep it filled to make sure they have it," he said.

TOM ELLEDGE, owner of the Palatine Service Standard Station on Northwest Highway and Robertson Rd., doesn't feel that the local patrons and motorists are hurt as much by the gas shortage as people who want to take vacations and trips in their cars and are afraid they'll run out of gas.

"You know, it's funny because I don't think anyone understands what this gas shortage is all about. I don't even understand it because the company doesn't tell me anything. It seems like most of my customers don't even believe it and they're being affected by it," said Al Mazzuca, owner of Al's Enco, 3005 Kirchoff Rd., Rolling Meadows.

Whether there is an actual gas shortage or not, Dave Stiert, service station attendent at Ken's Arco on Golf and Elmhurst Roads in Mount Prospect, feels that the freeze on gas prices was a good thing.

"Stations aren't fighting to outdo each other with lower prices anymore. All of the prices are stabilized and everyone is making enough to break even and make a profit. If the freeze is lifted, prices might stay stabilized for a while or we might go back to the past situation."

Some station owners and employes agree with him, and some do not. However, it seems that a few things are for certain: the gas prices are stabilized a penny or two from each other, stations are closing earlier and on Sundays, and to at least the station owners' delight, the gimmicks are gone.

Scientists give coal a 'bath'

The best tool for cleaning up the environment may be the bathtub.

Not an ordinary bathtub, but a sophisticated device to wash and vacuum sulfur from coal — the largest source of sulfur-oxide pollution in the United States. Sulfur is inert, but when burned, it creates a sulfuric acid mist in the air.

Coal-burning furnaces emit almost 27 million tons of sulfur-oxide pollution into the air we breathe each year; it could climb to 55 million tons by 1990 — more than enough to fill a freight train reaching from Los Angeles to New York and back.

There are 280 billion tons of coal reserves in the energy-starved eastern states. Less than 10 per cent can meet 1975 air pollution standards. Utility companies, particularly in the east, count on coal as a prime energy source. It is inexpensive ($6 to $8 a ton) and more plentiful than oil, gas or nuclear energy.

DR. ROBERT Meyers and a team of scientists found a way to remove 40 to 80 per cent of the sulfur from coal. They give it a warm bath (about the temperature of tepid tea) in a ferric sulfate solution.

The amount of sulfur removed depends on where the coal comes from. The Pittsburgh bed in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio has been described as the most valuable individual mineral deposit in the United States and perhaps the world.

The Meyers process can remove 50 to 70 per cent of the sulfur from Pittsburgh-bed coal, and 60 to 80 per cent from coal in the Lower Kittaning bed, also in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Dr. Meyers says processed coal produces more heat per pound, thereby conserving the natural resource, and produces less ash than untreated coal.

HERE'S WHAT happens: coal goes through a leacher, a separator and a washer, then is dried. Sulfur and ash are removed and the bathwater is cleaned and regenerated by running it through a precipitator and treating it with air.

Removing sulfur by the Meyers process won't end all sulfur-oxide pollution, Dr. Meyers says. It offers a much better chance, however, than stack scrubbers which trap sulfur after the coal is burned. Officials of the Federal Power Commission and the Environmental Protection Agency seem to agree.

"A stack-gas control device has to be at least as reliable as the power plant's combustion unit," says Robert Jimeson, environmental adviser for the FPC. "Demands for energy vary throughout the day, but stack scrubbers run best at an unvarying pace."

THE MEYERS process is relatively inexpensive. While other methods add as much as $1 for each million units of energy (BTUs) produced, the bathing process costs only about 10 cents for each 1 million BTUs — about $2.50 a ton of coal.

Further, the chemical cleaning plant can be located at the mouth of a mine, at a power plant, or anywhere between.

Meyers and his team, Dr. Elias Koutsoukos, Dr. Warren Hamersma and L. J. Van Nice, are awaiting completion of a pilot plant that will clean a half-ton of coal an hour. The test plant is being built at a TRW Inc. facility at San Juan Capistrano, Calif. Several 100-tons-an-hour demonstration plants will be installed later at selected power stations.

Everyone involved in the work, including Environmental Protection Agency officials, agrees that no single solution or process is possible. All say, however, that Dr. Meyers' process will go a long way to help solve this nation's vital air pollution problems.

They say 'let 'er shake' in world's quake capital

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — If an earthquake doesn't hit the small California farming town of Hollister soon, red-faced seismologists are going to have to produce some new theories.

But the mayor of "the earthquake capital of the world" thinks the experts are safe.

For the second time in three months, a quake expert predicted recently that the town of 8,500 about 100 miles south of San Francisco would be rattled by a tremor.

PROFESSOR Robert L Kovach of Stanford Univesity said a quake measuring 5.8 on the Richter scale — "a healthy jolt" — will hit the Hollister area by the end of this week if current theories are correct. He said it would cause little damage.

"We're due for a pretty good jolt," agreed Hollister Mayor Earl Holt. "We haven't had one in two or three years. But I'm not saying it's going to be a 5.8."

Holt said townspeople weren't too concerned since Hollister has been shaken by moderate tremors an average of twice a year since the 1930s.

"I'm giving the same advice I did in March when the government made its prediction — keep your bourbon in a safe place," Holt said.

"Heck, I'll probably be out of town anyway. I'm going fishing at Eagle Lake. So let 'er shake."

U. S. GEOLOGICAL Survey scientists predicted March 22 that the Hollister region would be shaken by a 4.5 to 5.0 Richter quake "in the next several months."

The government agency's first quake forecast ever was based on four other moderate quakes which occurred in the same area during the past year and a half.

Kovach said his forecast was based on water level changes during the past year in a 600-foot deep well drilled into the San Andreas fault near the La Cienega winery, a dozen miles south of Hollister.

IF THE ROCKS along the fault are cracking and becoming more porous, as scientists believe, a 5.8 quake is imminent in the area — if their theories are correct.

"We're waiting to see if an earthquake will occur in the very near future," he told 300 scientists attending a three-day meeting at Stanford.

More predictions came from Dr. Thomas C. Hanks of Caltech, who said the southern California hamlets of Anza and Lytle Creek are likely to be rocked sooner or later by tremors of 6 or greater Richter magnitude.

Hanks based his prediction on activity patterns during the past century on the San Jacinto fault, but he set no time for the occurrences.

The Almanac

Today is Monday, July 2, the 183rd day of 1973 with 182 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

King Olav V of Norway was born July 2, 1903.

On this day in history:

In 1776, the Continental Congress formally approved a resolution which became the Declaration of Independence from Britain. It was signed two days later.

In 1881, President James Garfield was shot by Charles Giteau in Washington, D.C. Garfield died Sept. 19 of that year.

In 1937, American aviatrix Amelia Earhart and co-pilot Frederick Noonan were reported lost over the Pacific Ocean. They were never found.

In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson signed a new civil rights bill.

A thought for the day:

American educator Horace Mann said, "Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity."

The Lighter Side

by Dick West

WASHINGTON — In olden times when a king became displeased with some of his subjects he likely would order them banished.

According to evidence at the Watergate hearings, the modern way of dealing with offenders against a head of state is to have their tax returns audited.

The old way was more humane.

This is not to suggest that banishment was any bed of roses. The lament of the exiled is a favorite theme in literature.

SHAKESPEARE called it "the bitter bread of banishment." But he never tasted a tax return after the Internal Revenue Service had made hash of it.

When, in the Bbilical account, Cain is sent to wander over the face of the Earth, he cries out that his punishment is more than he can bear.

But Cain never had to justify the entries on a Form 1040.

Anyone who has undergone such an experience surely will emphathize with Robert W. Greene, the Newsday reporter whose return was audited at White House instigation after he wrote a series of articles about President Nixon's friend Bebe Rebozo.

Greene said the audit caused him "untold mental anguish" even though he received a "clean bill" from the Internal Revenue Service. Yea, and verily.

IT IS DISTRESSING enough merely to be caught in an error by a Martinsburg Monster, as the computers that check tax returns are affectionately called.

As an instrument of retribution, the "terrible swift sword" mentioned in "Battle Hymn of the Republic" probably couldn't touch those terrible swift computers.

I ran afoul of one last year and I aged 10 years before I got straightened out. And the White House wasn't even mad at me.

Heaven knows what torment I might have suffered had I been on the White House "enemy list" described in the Watergate testimony of John Dean.

Apparently, some of the newsmen, entertainers, politicians and others in disfavor at the White House were marked for harassment by government investigators, including tax auditors.

THOSE AUDITORS may require a line-by-line explanation of everything on a return. I couldn't explain parts of my return to myself, much less to an auditor.

Now that we know this sort of thing goes on, the prudent course is either to (1) make sure to stay in the good graces of the White House or (2) make certain one's tax return will withstand intensive scrutiny.

"Off with their heads," the old kings used to cry. Now it's "Off with their miscellaneous deductions."

Owners bought Levitt homes— and headaches

by PAT GERLACH

Mounting problems with the service department for the Levitt-built homes in Schaumburg are causing headaches for homeowners and village officials.

Repeated complaints of an unresponsive attitude toward correcting construction problems finally caused the village board to take action last week that should help the homeowners in the $36,000 to $50,000 dwellings.

Until further notice, the East Coast based builder will be issued building permits "one at a time."

This means that a building permit will be issued only on satisfactory completion of the house for which the previous permit was granted.

LEVITT IS IN this position because of couples like Gene and Diane McDonald, Paul and Mary Anne Clarke and scores of other Sheffield Park residents, many of whom prefer to remain unidentified.

Though the Clarkes' situation appears far more serious than the McDonalds', the two cases provide contrasting examples of difficulties in the subdivision.

The McDonalds and their two children moved to Sheffield Park from Hoffman Estates last December. They are originally from the East and were enthused about owning a Levitt home — their first for which they saved eight years.

But after six months, their lot remains one of about eight which has not been final graded or seeded by the builder. Yet, other newer homes on the same block of Elgin Lane in Sheffield East have been completed.

REPEATED CALLS to Levitt's local service department have proven futile as did a long-distance call to the builder's New York office.

"We are alarmed because we have just never gotten any explanation for the delay or even an estimate of when the work will be completed," says Diane McDonald. The family is anxious for a lawn and yard, containing the builder promised shrubs and trees, before summer ends.

Shading variances in woodwork in the $42,000 house also prove disconcerting to Diane.

Bannisters and a room divider, constructed of obviously different types of wood, do not match. "We feel the same quality materials and workmanship should have been used in our house as were displayed in the model," she says.

But, according to information provided by Tom Franklin, Levitt's project service manager, little can be done to rectify the McDonalds' woodwork problem.

Franklin says he regrets that the McDonalds are going to "have to live" with the wood stain problem.

The landscaping delay is attributed to poor weather conditions, but Franklin predicts that work will continue to proceed as rapidly as possible —weather permitting.

BUT THE CLARKE family, after living on Compton Lane in Sheffield West for two years, have different problems.

Their garage floor has never dried due to a foundation crack. During wet periods, the entire floor is covered with water; in cold weather, a sheet of ice usually covers the garage concrete.

Standing water is almost always visible in the Clarkes' rear yard. Additional top-soil has been promised but never delivered, says Mary Anne.

Levitt workers last week came out to look at the garage problem. At that time they dug a hole at the outside garage wall, presumably to provide for foundation drainage. Soil was then loosely piled over the opening but nothing further has been done.

Mary Anne says she was told by a Levitt representative that there was no known solution for the garage problems.

A number of dead shrubs, to be replaced by the builder, and a front door stoop which drains toward the house compound the Clarkes' problems further.

FRANKLIN SAYS the garage problem and other complaints at the Clarkes' will be cared for as soon as possible.

Even so, the couple and their two children remain enthused with Schaumburg, and essentially with Levitt.

Mary Anne says she and Paul chose Schaumburg because "it is without a doubt THE place to live." They moved to Sheffield from a Hinsdale apartment in 1971 and had lived in California for 10 years prior to that.

"This is an excellent community and we live in the very best neighborhood in the world," she said. She also considers their house to be of basically good quality.

"I'm not completely down on Levitt. There are many repairs they have willingly and well made for us," she added. Boards above their garage doors and dining room paneling was replaced by Levitt at the Clarkes' request last year.

"We think this is the best home in the world, but we just want the remaining problems, particularly the foundation crack, corrected," she said.

OTHER SHEFFIELD residents freely discussed problems — crumbling pillar foundations, lack of sill seal and landscaping or shrubbery loss — provided they would not be identified.

"If my name gets into the newspaper, I am afraid they will just not come back at all," she said.

Feeling intimidated by the builder, one young mother said she would not formally complain because the company has taken first steps to correct some of her problems.

"We want the village to remain aware of our problems, so that when Levitt comes back to them for something this can be taken into consideration," said another homeowner.

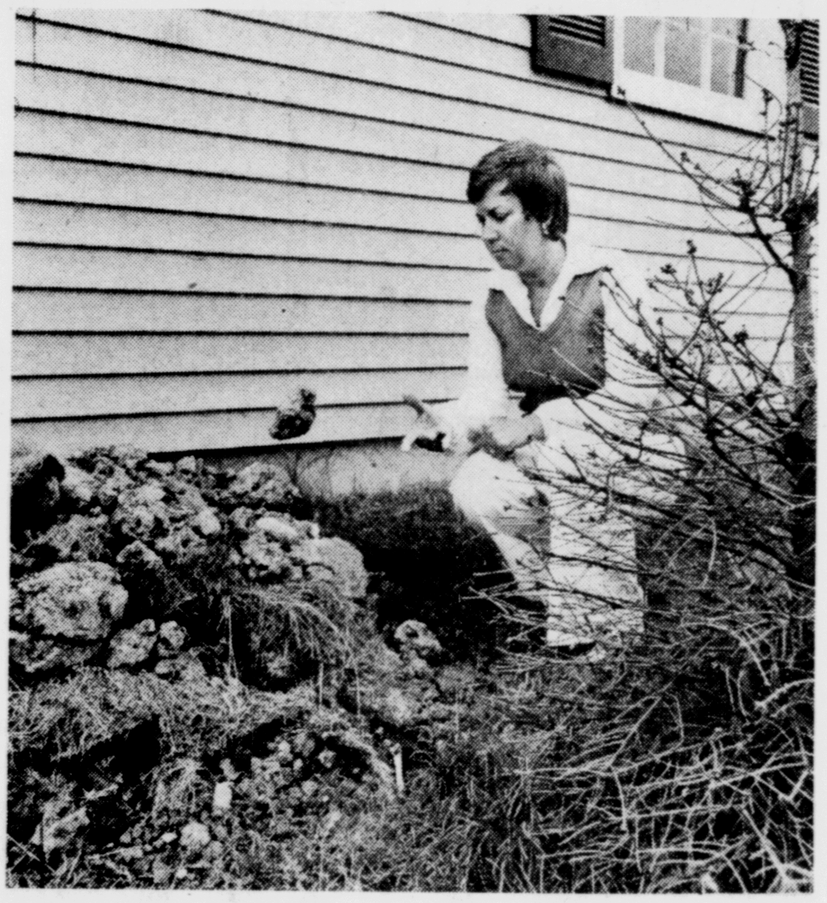

Most attribute service problems recently experienced to a lack of communications. With Franklin spending much of his time in the field, he is difficult to contact directly by phone, they claim.

BUT, ALL interviewed praised the work Franklin has accomplished since joining the Sheffield project two months ago.

"At least with Tom Franklin, I get the impression someone is listening and things get done in time," Mary Anne Clarke believes.

But, in the meantime, the Clarkes, McDonalds, other neighbors and now even the village board continue to wait for that day.

WITH NO SEED in her back yard and a seedy combination of wood paneling in her house, Mrs. Eugene McDonald is not having all the joy she should from her new Levitt home in Schaumburg. She still waits for grass around her house and for the developer to correct the odd mixture of wood used to panel interior walls.

A DIRT PILE (at left) stands along side the garage at the Clarke residence in Schaumburg's Levitt development. The dirt came from a hole dug to drain water from the house's attached garage. Repairs have begun but Mrs. Clarke is short on patience while waiting for her two-year-old problem to end.

'Full impact 2 weeks away'

Schaumburg administrator John Coste does not believe that the full impact of a change in issuing building permits will be felt by Levitt and Sons for at least two weeks.

While building permits now wil be issued one at a time, Levitt recently applied for and received permits for about 130 of the 200 homes to be built this summer.

Coste predicted a possible slowdown after houses now under permit have been completed.

Following village board action Tuesday, Coste reported a "lengthy" conversation with Ken Campbell, Levitt regional engineer.

"Campbell said he thought that we could work out problems within the next two to three weeks to a point where reconsideration could be at least justified," said Coste.

Sheffield Park cutting down complaint backlog

After two months on the job as project service manager in Sheffield Park, Tom Franklin is acutely aware of a problem.

"I inherited a year's backlog of service complaints and calls," Franklin explained last week. However, he refused to detail the reasons for the backup.

"I think I have made some headway and I intend to make a lot more during the next three months," he said. "In fact, since April, I think the service department has done one hell of a good job here," Franklin quickly added.

Employed by Levitt for four years, Franklin was previously service manager at Strathmore in Buffalo Grove.

HE FEELS that Sheffield Park complaints may not be as great as some residents would like to believe. "You always hear about what we are not doing but no one ever bothers to speak up and tell about what we have done," he said.

By mid-July, Franklin expects to have a service staff of seven. That is two more people than he is now working with.

Franklin has instituted the procedure of acknowledging each complaint or request for service by letter.

Whenever possible, service staffers correct problems but frequently it is necessary to call in the contractor, which causes further delay, he said.

Sheffield Park residents have voiced some concern about the lack of walk-through inspection of their homes until after mortgage closing.

"We don't forbid a pre-title inspection. In fact, they are often done. But we make it a hard and fast rule not to let the potential owner see the building until it has been cleaned up," he said. For this reason, pre-closing inspections are scheduled 24 to 48 hours prior to the appointment for signing papers.

A SECOND inspection is conducted 30 days following occupancy and final warranty inspection is one-year after closing.

"But any and all letters of complaint received in the interim are followed up," said Franklin.

He noted that for economic reasons, it is necessary for the builder to adhere strictly to the one-year warranty period. "But that is not to say that we haven't in some cases had to go over that," he said.

Franklin is attempting to organize a program to recheck service calls, at least on a spot check. "This is to be sure that the work has been done and the customer satisfied," he said.

Franklin says he has the most conscientious service department possible.

"I really sincerely believe that the people in Sheffield Park are going to begin to agree with me within the next three months," Franklin concluded.

KEN CAMPBELL, regional engineer for Levitt, said the "one-at-a-time" building permit policy adopted by Schaumburg is going to be more of an administrative burden than anything else.

The firm had already been issued 130 permits for the 200 homes it plans to construct this summer.

Concerning current complaints he said, "We found ourselves several months behind in Sheffield Park because of last year's weather conditions."

Campbell said sales and construction has moved ahead in the 950-home development, but landscaping, grading, seeding and planting have suffered because of wet weather last year.

"PEOPLE, generally, are very understanding, but there are communications problems," Campbell said.

He is a resident of Sheffield Park, though based with Levitt at their Schiller Park office. Campbell has worked with the Sheffield Park Home Owners Association to achieve better communications with residents, he said.

"We are building a good product; I think the village knows this and I think the Sheffield Park people know it, too. During the next several weeks we really expect to move ahead in taking care of any service problems, but I hope the village is not becoming oversensitive to individual service complaints," said Campbell.

In Buffalo Grove, more troubles...

Buffalo Grove residents in the village's Levitt subdivision, Strathmore, have been complaining to village officials for several years about the builder's problems.

The most recent charge was made two weeks ago at the village board meeting, when a resident asked the Buffalo Grove Village Board to follow the steps of Schaumburg in stopping the issuance of building permits to Levitt. The board took no action.

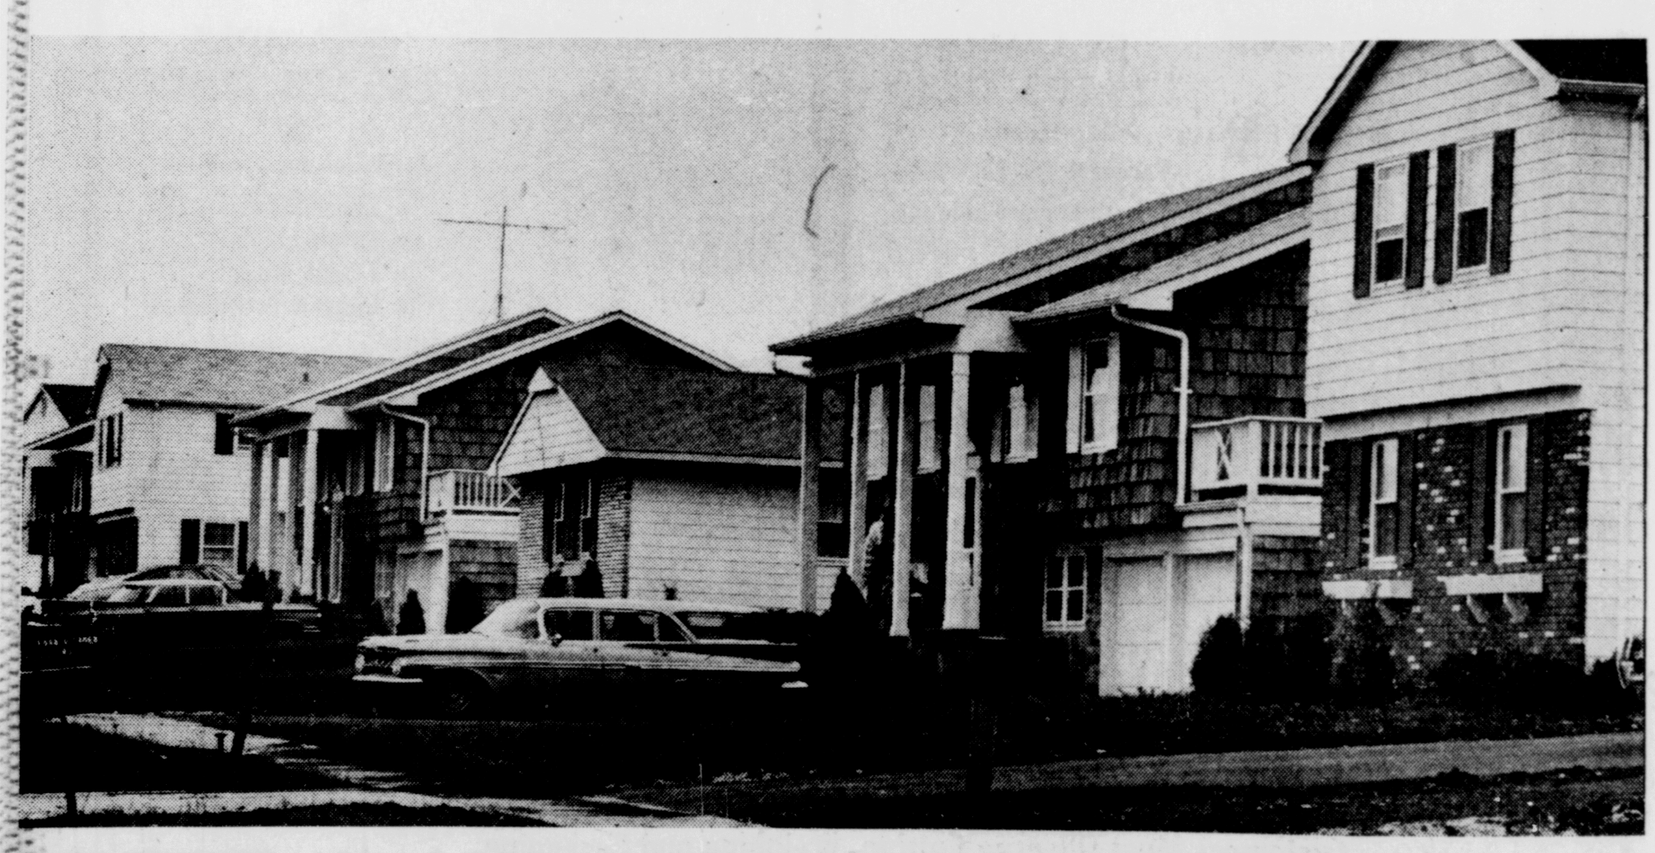

The residents said they have problems getting Levitt to grade their yards and complete imperfections found during the original inspection of the homes. One woman told the board she has waited for her 30-day inspection walkthrough for more than six months.

IN 1971, RESIDENTS of the area as well as the village were involved in a fight with Levitt over who would repair sidewalks in the subdivision before the village accepted them. There were charges that Levitt used an incorrect mixture and improperly poured cement when installing the sidewalks and driveway aprons.

After more than a year of pressuring Levitt to repair and replace unsuitable driveway aprons, curbs and sidewalks, Levitt's improvements, costing more than $60,000, were approved.

Residents who are now involved in trying to get Levitt to make repairs in Buffalo Grove told the village board they had to wait until Levitt finished its work in Schaumburg. They also said when they try to call Levitt with complaints they can never contact officials.

Levitt is soon scheduled to begin construction on two new parcels in Buffalo Grove. Unlike the single-family Strathmore subdivision, the new construction will be for multi-family homes.

LEVITT'S STRATHMORE subdivisions in Buffalo Grove are still a problem for homeowners there although some difficulties have been resolved. The trying times experienced by people buying Levitt homes, indicates some have a good run for their money after searching out the value Levitt built homes are reputed to be.

Religion Today... by Lester Kinsolving

The Christian Science Church may be disappearing

It has apparently been kept a well-guarded secret, but Christian Science, founded by the late faith healer Mary Baker Eddy, may be rapidly disappearing.

In San Francisco, for example, this column has discovered that during only the past seven years, the Sixth, the Tenth and the Twelfth Churches of Christ, Scientist have all become defunct and their buildings sold.

(The Sixth, an impressive building in the posh residential section of Pacific Heights, has had the first and last words carved on its Ionic portico covered up, leaving only "Church of Christ.")

Across the Bay in Oakland,the Second, the Sixth and the Ninth Churches have similarly perished.

There have been no replacements in either city, so that during this brief time nterval nearly one third of this denomination's total churches in these two major cities have been totally wiped out.

WHAT HAPPENS to the financial proceeds from the sale of these defunct Christian Science churches? (Especially now that church buildings are no longer regarded as one-purpose buildings, but are often converted into very valuable commercial buildings.)

This inquiry was directed, in Boston, to Allison Phinney, during my visit to the denomination's new $70 million national headquarters complex, next to the "Mother Church." Phinney is the Assistant Manager of the denomination's powerful Committee On Publicaions — which controls the famed and often lauded Christian Science Monitor. (This daily newspaper, Phinney remarked, lost $5 million last year.)

But as to what happens to the financial proceeds of the sale of defunct Christian Science church buildings, Phinney said that he did not know.

Yet in the Committee on Publications Northern California office, Catherine Chance said that she believed that all such proceeds revert to the Mother Church in Boston.

This is easy to believe, given the almost limitless power of the denomination's five-member Board of Directors — which is completely self-perpetuating.

Not only does this Board deny the rank and file members the right to vote for the directors of their denomination, but this Board also conceals from them and the public the total financial assets — and even the membership figures.

The Board of Directors even controls all Christian Science pulpits, by requiring that every one of the 3200 local congregations read the same, canned-in-Boston sermon which the Mother Church sends out weekly.

Even were the charismatic Mother Eddy still alive this would be intolerable to most late 20th century young people.

IN MALDEN, Massachusetts, for example, on Sunday, June 3, at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, there were only three people who looked younger than sixty or seventy: the virile and hirsute young soloist and two young females.

The total attendance at this main Sunday morning service was 35 — in an attractive Gothic church founded by Mrs. Eddy herself and built to seat at least ten times this number.

The head usher (there were, amazingly, four ushers for this corporal's guard) described this as "an average congregation."

Just across Boston's Mystic River in the new $70 million building, Phinney announced that for the first time the Board of Directors had elected a foreign treasurer for the denomination, Marc E. Engeler.

Mr. Engeler is a Swiss banker.

Grieving morticians lament new 'cheap-funeral' fad

by LOUIS CASSELS

A growing public reaction against costly funerals is hurting morticians in the pocketbook.

Their anguish is reflected in a current advertising campaign by the National Funeral Directors Association. It seeks to answer some of the criticisms which clergymen and others have made of modern funeral practices.

Judging from the ads — and the free brochures which the association is glad to send to anyone requesting them — funeral directors especially are grieved by the idea gaining acceptance among many Americans that a body should be cremated or buried as quickly, quietly and inexpensively as possible.

Advocates of this idea argue that it has two advantages. First, it is easier on the bereaved family than an elaborate public funeral with such features as visiting hours in the funeral home, display of the corpse in an open casket, etc.

SECOND, SWIFT private disposition of the body makes it possible to hold, at a convenient time later, a public memorial service at which attention can be focused on the spirit of the departed and the hope of eternal life, rather than morbidly centered on a casket and corpse.

The National Funeral Directors Association does not attempt to contest these views on religious grounds. It attacks them instead as bad psychology.

Viewing the body in an open casket before or during the funeral makes those who survive more aware of the reality of death, the association says.

If the deceased had a long, lingering death, the ravages of disease can be removed by the mortician's arts, including "the use of cosmetics," so that the bereaved will carry away "an acceptable image for recalling the deceased."

"OF COURSE THERE is pain" for survivors in viewing the body, the funeral directors' association acknowledges in one brochure. "But it is a hurt that helps to heal."

The visible presence of the corpse helps the family — including little children — "comprehend the real meaning of death." It also creates "the proper climate for mourning" so that all who view the corpse can feel the loss and "share the sorrow" of the bereaved family.

"Grief shared is gried diminished. For the bereaved, the funeral can be that first, important step toward emotional adjustment to their loss."

Another brochure deals with costs, which funeral directors feel critics have grossly exaggerated. It says a 1971 survey indicated the "average" regular funeral cost $983.

HOWEVER, THIS figure did not include cemetery lot, vault, grave marker "or miscellaneous charges such as honoraria for the clergyman, flowers, additional transportation charges, burial clothing or newspaper notices." These could add several hundred dollars to the "average" bill.

Whether a full-dress, fancy-casket, body-on-view funeral is worth what it costs the bereaved, in money and emotional drain, is a decision each family must make for itself.

But a growing number of Christians and secularists seem to be deciding there is something to be said for the ancient Jewish tradition of burying the body quickly in the plainest possible container, so the one who has died may be remembered, loved and missed, not as a cosmeticized corpse, but as a warm, living, human person.

Father Mello: sugar cane workers call him 'Amigo'

by RICHARD WEINGARTEN

ESCADA, Brazil (UPI) — Conservatives call him a Communist. Leftists call him a reactionary. But sugar cane workers call him "amigo."

He is Father Antonio Costa Mello, the dynamic parish priest of Cabo, Pernambuco. Cabo, pop. 50,000, is in the populous "Zona da Mata" sugar cane belt bordering Recife, Pernambuco, in Brazil's impoverished Northeast.

For more than a decade Father Mello has spearheaded activities trying to liberate landless peasants shackled under a decrepit sugar cane economy.

Father Mello, now 40, achieved national prominence in the early 1960s when he founded the first farmworkers' unions in the country. Until then rural workers were unprotected by Brazilian labor legislation.

From Cabo the union organizing spread rapidly throughout the country. Mello helped spur national concern for the peasants by making a number of speaking tours.

From his traveling "pulpit" he likened their living conditions to "white slavery."

In 1962 President Joao Goulart signed the Rural Workers' Law which gave the peasants the right to a minimum salary and social security benefits — rights which the urban working force had been granted in the 1930s.

Critics on the left berated Mello for working within the government-directed labor system. There were some, including many clerics, who thought Mello had gone too far. They labeled him communistic.

Mello maintains that the unions gave the peasants the legal instrument they needed in their fight for better salaries.

"The workers saw that unions provided them with the power to achieve their claims," Mello said in an interview.

The 1964 military coup d'etat that threw out the Goulart government and installed a military-based regime allowed the new unions to continue. It smashed the more radical Peasant League organization, however, and drove its leader, Francisco Juliao, from the country.

Mello said he shifted the focus of his work after 1964 from union organizing to seeing that the 1962 Worker's Law was put into practice.

"Even today, 10 years after its adoption it has not been put into complete effect," he said. "But when the unions take a violation to court it is usually backed up."

In 1967 Mello said he changed tactics again.

"I decided that the peasants' chief problem was not legal rights, nor unions, but land," he said, and in 1968 he had the satisfaction of seeing the government carry out a partial land redistribution in the Zona da Mata. From this start Mello helped found the Tiriri sugar cane cooperative.

First People, Then Plan Tiriri is currently owned and run by 600 cane growing families, Mello said. In slightly less than four years its total production volume has increased from 16,000 to 70,000 tons a year.

Mello attributed Tiriri's success to his belief that "only the peasants themselves can resolve their problems," adding: "I start from the people and work toward a plan, and not to fit a plan to the people."

Land usage needs planning

Growth, growth and more growth — must it go on until we're choked by an endless urban sprawl devoid of the open land that used to characterize Illinois?

No, it doesn't have to be this way — and the Northern Illinois Planning Commission is one of the first governmental institutions in this area making a conscious effort to cope with this problem.

NIPC is seeking the public's opinions on this problem. Besides holding public hearings, NIPC has sought verbal and written opinions — and is pooling its findings with those of the Lake-Porter County (Indiana) Regional Transportation Planning Commission. Later, each planning commission will act on its own findings.

At first glance, fighting urban sprawl — the endless patterns of neon lights and faceless subdivisions — would seem to be a project with which few would quarrel. Most persons don't like urban/suburban ugliness, and most of us would prefer at least traces of an earlier, calmer, more rural Illinois tradition — a tradition which we've paved over too many times.

But two obstacles will face agencies trying to make some sense out of the Chicago metropolitan area's growth:

— First, the Northwest suburbs are one of the fastest growing areas in the nation. As Chicago's population spreads across the six-county metropolitan area, our population zooms skyward. In the past, there's been enough land to accommodate the crowds, and the crowds are still coming — even though the land is disappearing.

— Second, as NIPC is well aware, each community develops on its own and attempts to gobble up as much land as possible for its own use. That land is used as the community wants to use it; NIPC exercises virtually no power to even suggest developing the land compatibly with other communities.

Both qualities — unrestrained development and local greed — must be consciously contained if we are to have the kind of green open spaces which are not only nice to look at but pleasant places for recreation.

When and if man's nature is curbed, and a policy is developed to encourage land preservation, it must be remembered that growth is not an evil in itself. Growth and change is an important force in any vibrant community, and a rational growth policy is one which preserves the natural world in line with the man-made community.

But, unless some agency such as NIPC can work towards a rational policy, we'll be crowded out by buildings, and the rich Illinois countryside will be lost forever (or at least pushed hundreds of miles beyond our grasp). NIPC can't start with its planning soon enough.

Watergate's boosting Skolnick

by TOM WELLMAN
Chief Editorial Writer

To those who have been close to Watergate, yet not close enough to be blinded by the searing rays of official lies, the scandal's had the effect of boosting careers and increasing fortunes.

Take the black man who discovered the Watergate burglars last year; fame has boosted his career. Take Judge Sirica, in whose courtroom John McCord decided to become honest. Take Howard Baker. Take Sam Ervin.

Take Robert Woodward, a Washington Post reporter whose newspaper won a Pulitzer Prize for his and Carl Bernstein's reporting. Ten days ago Woodward spoke at Harper College in Palatine — and you can be sure his fame allows him to charge a considerable amount of money for such a speech.

Finally, take Sherman Skolnick, who, like the rest of them, has stumbled onto something.

Skolnick is a self-styled legal researcher who helped expose the misdeeds of two Illinois Supreme Court justices several years ago. The two were eventually kicked off the bench and Skolnick became an instant celebrity in the Chicago area.

Since then, however, Skolnick's star has dimmed. He's been unable to unearth the kind of conspiracy that strikes the public's attention.

Now, however, Skolnick's into the Watergate caper — and, judging from his performance during Woodward's appearance at Harper, he's milking it for all it's worth.

Skolnick's the author of the complex conspiracy theory which links the Dec. 8 United Air Lines crash near Midway Airport in Chicago to Watergate. It seems that several persons aboard — U.S. Congressman George Collins, CBS-TV newswoman Michele Clark and money-laden Mrs. E. Howard Hunt, wife of the Watergate burglar — were involved, and certain government officials plotted to wreck the plane.

Normally, such thoughts would be regarded as the ravings of a lunatic. Today, however, there are two other factors:

—In the post-Watergate era, conspiracy theories are fashionable.

—Sherman Skolnick has a very loud voice.

Skolnick and his camp followers tried to interrogate Woodward during and after his Harper speech. It's an old tactic for Skolnick, for he tried it last year at Harper when Jack Anderson spoke.

Sherman Skolnick

One reason Skolnick persists is because he believes the news media are hushing up his theory; indeed, the news media are part of conspiracy which leaves only the small, independent newspapers to publish Skolnick's truth about the crash.

After Woodward's speech, Skolnick was asked why the theory is hushed up. His reply went something like this:

United Air Lines is controlled by Chase Manhattan Bank, one of the largest financial institutions in the world. Two of the largest stockholders, Nelson Rockefeller and Charles Percy, are putting pressure on the Chicago papers to not run the full coverage they should be running.

Skolnick was also asked how the Rockefeller and Percy pressure was made evident to the publishers. "Why, don't you know it comes through advertising pressure," Skolnick declared. It seems the two men have brought their weight to bear on four Chicago dailies and thus Skolnick's TRUE story hasn't appeared.

Well, OK, Sherman. With that kind of press conspiracy theory, how can your theories be considered? And how is it possible for any reporter to interrogate you? Silly slogans and simple dogmaticsms about conspiracies give you an ample opportunity to duck leading questions.

The theory Skolnick offers is troubling, but it's going to be difficult to find a court that Skolnick's going to trust to hear the case. Until then, Sherman Skolnick, with his unopened metal suitcase of "evidence," is doing a pretty good imitation of the original old Red-baiter himself, Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. And that's not helping Skolnick's credibility one bit.

She hits suburban 'slum'

To whom it probably won't concern:

We moved to Arlington Heights around March 12. Within a month my five-year-old daughter had been so frightened by an older child that she wouldn't ride a bike for a month.

My son was pushed around and taunted by other children. His "Peanuts" baseball was stolen, also a tennis ball left in our yard. Then his baseball bat was broken.

We went for a drive to Evanston one day and came home to find the glass on the front door broken. I waited a week and then assumed no one had done it because no one came to tell me. It's only going to cost $20 to have it repaired.

We have been searching for the new bat I bought our son after the first one was broken and his glove that his father bought him last year, for the past two days.

I've spanked my son for leaving it out on the back patio. He won't get another bat and glove.

We though we'd moved into a middle class neighborhood, not the slums. Thanks, Arlington Heights, for the welcome.

Mass transit bill 'needs backing'

One of the most pressing issues confronting our area today is the passage of a mass transit bill. Mass transportation concerns nt only the movement of people but also noise and air pollution as generated by the quantities of cars on the highways today. Then we need also to consider nerve "pollution" such as a great many of you have experienced in traffic tie-ups.

With the current shortage of gasoline, we feel that is is necessary for each of us to urge our state representatives and senators to pass a responsible mass transit bill in this session of the legislature.

Please write now.

'We the people' should fly U.S. flag

Something has been on my mind for days so finally decided to speak my piece.

Thursday, June 14, while driving through Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, I was amazed at the number of houses and businesses that failed to fly their flags. Is it because they don't care or haven't the time to put them out? This is one of the ways that we have to show we still care for our country. So let's stop and think for a little while that "we, the people" can make this a better place to live in.

Thank you for letting me express my opinion on a subject that is dear to me.

George F. Radelein
Elk Grove Village

Thank you

The Salvation Army very much appreciates your news coverage during our recent Doughnut Day drive. Your contribution has been responsible for making the public aware of the functions of the Army and in making Doughnut Day a success.

The Army is grateful to you for your cooperation in its year-round efforts to help thousands of less privileged families and unfortunate individuals in the Chicagoland area.

Fire story hit

Your report on the Northbrook stables fire, June 15, was sure void of detail.

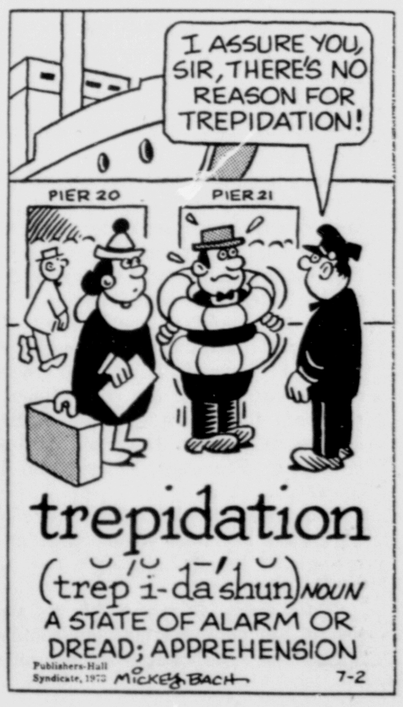

Deputy sheriff policeman R. Vanderbrouke sighted the smoke and fire coming from the roof of the sleeping quarters of my daughter, Pat Kizorek, and next to her, the two grooms. Awaking them and getting help the five sheriff's men and Pat ran through smoke and fire and led 95 horses to safety — and you put this on page three. If they committed a crime it would be the page one story.

So, to those brave officers, thanks to R. Vanderbrouke, Lt. Roy Olson, Lt. P. Bettiker and Jerome Casserly (we do not have the name of the fifth officer).

But to all of them and the fine firemen, God bless you all.

Word a day

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK — To the average person the disposal of material represents a loss.

To many hospitals battling soaring labor costs, the use of disposable cups, plates, knives, forks and spoons represents a savings, according to a survey of 48 major voluntary hospitals around the country.

The report sponsored by the Maryland Cup Corp. of Owings Mills, Md., said that 90 per cent of the hospitals questioned use disposables in some areas of patient feeding programs to cut labor costs. One quarter of the hospitals, according to the survey, expect to substitute paper and plastic dishes for china in the next five years.

Labor costs, the unwillingness of many people to work as dishwashers, higher prices for conventional china, silverware and dishwashing equipment and the breakage involved, have made "disposables" a new way of hospital business life. The report said another benefit of disposable eating equipment was "less cross infection."

THE DISPOSABLE food service industry has an estimated volume in excess of $300 million. Maryland Cup, which claims to be the nation's largest independent producer of disposable food service products, says more than 85 per cent of the U.S. hospitals and nursing homes use disposables to some degree.

William Mumma, director of food service operations at Wesley Pavilion-Northwestern Memorial Hospital, Chicago, says he turned to disposables in some areas in January, 1968 and has been "expanding them throughout the hospital ever since."

"Substantial savings were realized," Mumma said.

He figured that Wesley Pavilion saves about $30,000 a year because of the switch from conventional eating utensils. He cited payroll savings at $29,000, $6,600 in food, $215 in china, $185 in silverware, $600 in soap and cleansing compound — for a total of $36,600. Cost of the disposables ran about $6,870.

THE PRESBYTERIAN Medical Center in Denver is another case in point.

"We had trouble getting hot meals to the patients on some floors," said Mrs. Carol Hutchins, director of dietary. "There also was breakage and pilferage of china and utensils. Our labor costs were going higher and higher with no improvement in patient feeding."

Early in 1970, the hospital studied a system using convenience food, floor-by-floor heating with microwave ovens and utilization of disposable food serving items.

Mrs. Hutchins says "our labor costs have been cut drastically" and hot meals now can be served on all floors. The old system required 105 full-time dietary workers. Today only 65 are being used.

Seventy-one per cent of the hospitals polled also serve convenience food, and 88 per cent said they will be using such food by 1978.

Ad scare tactics under state probe

by United Press International

The Illinois Insurance Department plans to hold hearings next month to determine what action should be taken against 10 insurance firms that use ads employing "scare tactics," celebrity endorsements and misleading statements.

Insurance Director Fred Mauck said Thursday he has ordered the companies to stop using the advertisements in Illinois immediately.

He said the hearings could result in financial penalties for the firms, and they could be forbidden to do business in Illinois if they fail to comply with the department's orders.

THE ONLY Illinois-based company Mauck cited was Country Life Insurance of Bloomington, which did $7.8 million worth of business in the state last year.

One of the firm's ads, displayed by Mauck at a news conference, shows a man wrapped in bandages sitting on a hospital bed below a headline reading, "He Thought it Wouldn't Happen to Him."

"The pictorial illustration of a patient in obvious distress is one of the very worst pictorial scare tactics that I have yet seen," Mauck said.

Mauck said he especially disapproves of ads which use celebrity endorsements, and cited two examples using Jack Benny and Art Linkletter.

He said the Benny ad did not mention that Benny holds an interest in the firm, American Republic Insurance of Des Moines, Iowa, and the Linkletter ad fails to mention that Linkletter was paid for his endorsement by the National Home Life Assurance Co. of Malver, Pa.

Both ads are in violation of Illinois law, he said.

MAUCK ALSO cited an ad by the Charter National Life Insurance Co. of St. Louis. He said it misled readers into believing they would get liberal claims, could use claim money in any way they chose, and gave the impression the rates were inexpensive.

"Frankly, about everything is wrong with this advertisement that can be wrong," he said.

Mauck said he plans to hold hearings both to correct the problems "and to serve warning on all insurance companies which advertise their products in Illinois."

"I am very much concerned that insurance is not sold in Illinois the way other kinds of industries sell soap, deodorants and aspirin," he said.

Old 'n' new meet at Kral's shop for kids

When Tom Klingenmier and his wife Patti open their new Schaumburg store this fall, they'll be carrying on a 50-year tradition of selling an unusual variety of children's furnishings.

Everything from a hand painted Victorian-style bassinet to the newest model baby buggies in wet-look vinyls will be offered at the Kral's Kiddie Korner. Located in the Woodfield Commons center, this will be the seond Kral's store to open in the past 50 years.

The new 21,000 square foot outlet will be three times the size of the present Kral's store and warehouse at 4338 W. North Avenue in Chicago. The business was originally started by Bohimul Kral in 1876, a stove dealer on 18th Street in Chicago. He began selling juvenile furniture in 1923, at the North Avenue address.

KLINGENMIER, 30-year-old company president, says the original traditions associated with Kral's have been passed on through several changes in ownership.

"The variety and quantity of children's furniture still amazes me, since my wife and I entered the business three years ago," Klingenmier says.

"Plus I get calls regularly from second and third generation customers from the old neighborhood and all over. They want to chit chat. They tell me they grew up a Kral's crib or that a buggy has worn out after several pass-alongs over a couple of generations. Then they check our hours or ask about a particular style of furniture they want for their own children.

"We try to represent all manufacturers and finishes in the furniture," he added. This includes some 75 buggies, many crib styles and 22 types of mattresses at the present store. French Provincial style cribs are the biggest sellers now, and colors are being introduced in nursery decor — yellow, orange and purple.

A LINE OF bedspreads, wallpaper and drapes will enable parents to color coordinate nursery furnishings. Maternity and children's wear will also be featured at the new store.

Parents and grandparents can spend as little as $75 or as much as $900 in furnishing a nursery, Klingenmier said. Noting that parents sometimes appear to be more concerned about thecr decorating scheme than how the furnishings will affect their baby, he says, "I always tell people that if they're concerned about cutting the price anywhere, they should cut it anywhere but the mattress. The important thing is that for the first few months of a child's life, he needs a firm mattress."

Additional services to be featured at the new store include a mail order division, an interior decorating service, pardemonstrations and a program of speakers for expectant mothers.

Managing your family's money

A few tips to stretch tight vacation dollars

by MERLE E. DOWD

If that dream vacation you've been planning all winter is fading away due to rising prices, gas rationing or crowds where you want to go, consider these alternatives —

Cancel. Instead of traipsing off to somebody else's backyard, decide — "This is the summer to explore nearby places you've been reading about but never visited." If you're a real con artist, you might sell this plan to a family poised for takeoff — but don't count on it.

Shorten your trip from three weeks to two — or from two weeks to one.

Bravely stick to your original concept but modify it to cut corners. Cost-conscious travelers get more for their tourist dollar with the same penny-pinching tricks sharp shoppers practice in the markets. If you opt this third alternative, examine these ideas for getting up to 95 per cent of the fun on your trip for 70 to 75 per cent of infalted dollars:

1. Stop at one of the blooming array of budget motels. Instead of a room with color television, a tub designed to collect shower water, banks of bureau drawers no one uses, a fancy cocktail lounge and swimming pool, look for a motel that sells a great bed, shower, and plain pipe clothes racks — at half the cost. Two can stay in some for $7.70 — four for $9.90 — or thereabouts.

We've stayed in rooms offered by two chains lately. They offer essentials without frills for prices you remember from the early 60s. You'll find one or more at major highway intersections and cities. But, don't expect a bellhop to carry your bag or free color TV. And no credit cards — cash only. A few do offer a swimming pool. You might have to walk farther to fill a smaller ice bucket. But, remember, the main object is a restful night's sleep en route — not a mini-vacation at every stop. Reserve space ahead because they're popular.

2. At ocean resorts you'll find accommodations "right at the ocean's edge" priced higher than space across the road or a block inland. But, the walk is short.

Few resort areas excluse the public from the beach. Thus, you gain access to the water by walking or driving a bit farther at a big saving per day. At night the swinging spots are open to everyone.

Reservations are more readily available at off-water sites too. Examine the wording of brochures for phrases like "waterfront rights," "beach access nearby," or "close to public beach." Then, compare prices with places promoting their private beach. Similar trade-offs are usually available at mountain, desert or island resorts.

3. Eat as few meals as possible in restaurants while traveling. Carry your own immersion heater and a mug to heat water for coffee or tea. Cereal with milk, sweet rolls and fruit bought the night before complete a breakfast in your room while packing up. If breakfast isn't complete without juice, cool a can in an ice bucket insulated with a towel overnight.

Ditto lunch or dinner — but not both. Eating an honest-to-goodness restaurant meal at lunchtime offers a welcome break in driving and costs less for a family than dinner. Then, nibble on crackers, cheese, sandwiches and fruit in your room at night.

4. Look for free fun activitias at your destination. If fishing is the key activity, bring your own boat or inflatable raft. Explore the shops and craft or local art shows. Ask where the natives go for entertainment. Are there parks, free industry tours, free concerts and demonstrations, or group activities open to anyone? When eating out, look beyond the usual tourist places and discover those spots prized by local residents. A thorough reading of the local newspaper usually turns up a flock of interesting ideas and schedules of impending events.

You'll be pleasantly surprised and feel a bit smug when you carry through your original vacation plan — at a savings.

FOR MRS. RICHARD HORNE, Hoffman Estates, it was second time around as den mother when her youngest son became eligible for Cub Scouts last fall. Den mothers are increasingly hard to recruit.

DEN MOTHERS find projects that can be finished in a single meeting are best. Mrs. John Fiedler helps Scott Garlisch complete a leather change purse made by boys in her Rolling Meadows Den 5. Though her own son has graduated into Boy Scouting, Mrs. Fiedler enjoyed being a den mother so much, she kept on.

Keeping the Cub Promise

by KAREN THOMPSON

"I promise to do my best, to do my duty to God and country. To be square and to obey the law of the pack."

Den mothers are very special people in the eyes of young Cub Scouts. They offer their time and open their homes so boys receive a chance to keep the Scout Promise.

"I'm not a miracle worker, but I try to encourage the boys to be honest," said Mrs. John Fiedler, leader of Den 7 in Rolling Meadows.

Mrs. Fiedler, mother of five childen, became a den mother two years ago when her son was first eligible for Cub Scouting. Her son has since stepped up the ladder to Webelos and Boy Scouts, but because Mrs. Fiedler so enjoyed being a den mother, she couldn't give it up.

"The boys give me a lift. I look forward to their arrival for meetings," she said.

Mrs. Donald Unavy, assistant leader of Den 1 in Des Plaines was asked one day, "Who but someone nice would want to be a den mother?"

SHE BELIEVES volunteering as a den mother is rewarding and satisfying. "Some parents don't have time for the individual attention boys need so we hope they can find this in their den mother," she said.

Also serving as a den leader coach, Mrs. Unavy coordinates den mothers in the Des Plaines district for monthly meetings to discuss new ideas, service projects and behavior problems.

She receives training twice a year at the Northwest Suburban Council-Boy Scouts of America, located on Rand Road in Arlington Heights.

Den mothers are not easy to find in the Northwest suburbs. Increasing numbers of mothers are working and don't have enough outside time for scouting. Some live in apartments and don't feel they have the room, and still others fear they lack the qualifications required of a den mother.

The solution to these problems lies with the Boy Scout Council. National and area scouting headquarters have books for everything from indoor games to song books to craft ideas.

"A DEN MOTHER must be a junk collector," said Mrs. Fiedler. She said the first year she started as a den mother she kept just one jump ahead of the boys with her leader's book. "I didn't realize I had so many hidden talents until I started working on projects," she added.

Mrs. Richard Horne, leader of Den 5 in Hoffman Estates, has returned to her post as a den mother after a 10-year retirement period. She first became a den mother when her older sons, now 18 and 19, were of scouting age. When her youngest son, 9, became eligible for Scouts last September, she enlisted as a den mother for a second stint.

"It's all worth my while. I hope to get a message across," said Mrs. Horne. "When the meetings are over and the boys don't want to go home, I guess that's a sign they've had a good time."

Although only young boys are eligible for Cub Scouts, the program encourages family participation. Each month the scouts and their families attend special pack meetings.

ALL PREPARATIONS for these gatherings are made by the Cub Scouts. Each den is responsible for such tasks as opening ceremonies, songs, games, skits and refreshments. "We try to involve every boy in the preparations for pack meetings," said Mrs. Unavy.

In addition to involving families, scouting also teaches boys to work together as a team and it promotes responsibility. "Den mothers act as guides, but we must accomplish something besides having a good time," said Mrs. Unavy.

Although scouting is meant to teach boys, they also have countless hours of fun. Projects range from kits, bean bags and scooters to making pumpkin pies. When Mrs. Unavy's den made bean bags, each boy was allowed a turn using her sewing machine. "I try to let the boys do constructive things they aren't allowed to do at home," she said.

Songs are also a part of scouting, but due to societal influences, some of the boys think it's "sissified" to sing. Mrs. Fiedler has a tactful method for attacking this problem. "I just tell them if singing bothers you, just cover up your ears and sing out, loud."

AT A CANDLE ceremony in Des Plaines last Christmas, the boys arranged a program around the song "Little Drummer Boy." When it came time to sing, the only voice to be heard was that of the cubmaster.

Mrs. Horne explained that skits also present a problem when there is memorization or speaking involved. "The boys really ham it up at meetings, but when they stand before an audience they get the shakes and clam up."

In the past, crafts were emphasized to a greater degree in Cub Scouts. Boys are often all thumbs and the den mothers agreed that the best projects can be finished in one meeting.

Mrs. Unavy said she is very careful in choosing craft projects. "If the boys had known they painted their scooters with paint called Purple Mist, they would have thought it feminine and lost interest."

Mrs. Fiedler took a poll in her den to determine what the boys would like to do most. The overwhelming winner in the poll was to sleep outside in a tent.

MRS. FIEDLER had never camped out in her life, though she admitted she had always wanted to sleep out in a tent.

"I had no idea how to light a camp fire. I tried rubbing two sticks together with little results, let alone a spark. I had no idea how to set up a tent, either, but I learned right along with the boys," she said.

Other outings popular with the boys are bike rodeos, fishing, picnics and ice skating. One den took a tour of the local fire station. Being too young, the boys were not allowed to ride up in the snorkel so the den mother, "scared to death of heights," rode up into the sky clutching the sides of the machine. The boys thought she was a real hero.

The den mothers agreed that all the boys like games. One den learned the rules and regulations of soccer, then trooped to the backyard to put their learning into practice.

Being the good sports that they are, the den mothers joined in the game until they got kicked a few times. One den mother ended up sprawled out on the ground with eight giggling faces looking down at her.

BEHAVIOR PROBLEMS do not appear to be much of a difficulty. Each mother has her own "now hear this" sermon and agrees it is imperative to lay down the law from the beginning.

Mrs. Unavy's son once told her, "Mom, you're the strictest den mother, but we sure have a lot of fun." She believes there is a fine line in discipline. "Some mothers are too busy being a pal to realize they must set an example for the boys. You have to be an ogre sometimes."

Likewise, Mrs. Fiedler demands mutual respect from her den. "I collect antiques and one boy once asked why I asked them to be so careful of my 'junky chairs,' " she said with a laugh.

"Being a den mother isn't an easy job," said Mrs. Horne. "When we quit having meetings for the summer, I'm going to scrub my kitchen floor and keep it that way for a while," she confided.

DESPITE MINOR problems, the mothers agreed that if meetings are well planned and kept interesting, the boys are no problem. In fact, Mrs. Fiedler said she once helped at a girls' Brownie meeting and vowed that boys are a lot easier to handle.

Keeping the boys interested is very important in instilling a good attitude toward scouting. "We must involve them in a variety of projects and outings to ensure that when they get into Webelos and Boy Scouts, they haven't lost interest," said Mrs. Unavy.

Yes, a den mother is a very special person and whether she cries tears of joy when a boy tells her she's the best den mother in the world, or tears of anxiety when the boys have accidentally poured plaster of paris down her sink drain, she has given her most to help the boys keep their Cub Scout promise.

Fashion

Mary Mahoney, a spring graduate of Harper College's two-year fashion design career program, is currently showing some of her original fashions at the Pink Peony in Arlington Heights, Algonquin and Arlington Heights Roads.

Mrs. Charles Klehm, owner of the Pink Peony, is displaying Mary's line along with old-fashioned clothing items.

Creations by Miss Mahoney include suede and hand-woven wool sportswear, body sweaters, evening wear and a four-piece bridal ensemble that includes dashikis for the groom and best man.

"I am working on a fall line right now," said the young Hoffman Estates designer. "I like to use a lot of hand worked details in my designs. They appear more unusual as opposed to ones that are able to be mass-produced. In spite of the extra time involved, this is the favorite part of my work."

CURRENTLY Miss Mahoney, whose experiences in the fashion world range from alteration work and clerking to operating industrial sewing machines, is presently working out of her home at 462 Bode Road.

"Eventually I hope to find an old house to convert into a design boutique that will display crafts and clothes and also feature a tea room," she commented.

In addition to free lance designing, Mary is demonstrating sewing machines for Singer at Marshall Field's in the Woodfield Shopping Center, and teaching a course in art needlework at Harper College.

COSTUME JEWELRY manufacturers experimented this spring and summer and came away smiling. Big colorful beads are taking over in the accessories, and it looks like much more of the same for fall and winter.

One jewelry representative sees beads as a strong selling item from this past May through September.

Right now they are out of the testing phase and into the pre-peak. They will stay pre-peak until the end of July. August will be peak period and then beads will stay at that plateau for probably a year. For the last four years prior to May, beads have not been as popular because fashion was in a much too tailored stage.

Colors for fall will be burgundy, hunter green, the brown tones and blues in both necklaces and bracelets. The chunky chocker will do well in beads, sometimes in combinations of different shapes.

BLACK WILL also be excellent in beads as an accessorizing color and there is much talk about the Lucite and crystal looks.

The length to look for is the 30-inch graduated one. And along with the bead craze come button earrings. Wedding bands and hoops are still the big volume sellers, but not for long.

Psyched out by a sign

With food prices climbing the way they have been, it is a temptation to give up on trying to economize when grocery shopping. However, since I grew up as the eldest in a large family, I have found that shopping for food with economy in mind is practically part of my moral code.

But, as everyone knows, it gets harder and harder to do these days. The problem in shopping is to find the REAL bargains, not just what the store managers want customers to think are the bargains.

This was made clear to me last week as I was wheeling my cart by the meat counter. There was a huge crowd at one end — the end where chicken in its various forms is usually displayed. I gradually worked my way in to where there was obviously a good buy. A sign at the back of the case said in big red letters, "LIMIT 2." Whatever it was — I couldn't see yet — it had to be a real deal.

After a while I got close enough to see a man unloading packages from a cart, and I could see the women grabbing them as fast as he could produce them.

EVENTUALLY I moved close enough to get a package. It was chicken, and it looked pretty good until I looked at the price per pound. It was no deal at all. It was the same price as the week before. And then it hadn't been on sale. Apparently the psychological effect of the limit sign was a success though.

Most of the time I am just a private shopper, but when I experience something like this, I get very consumeristic. I can't understand how the same shoppers who showed their strength of buying (or not buying) power during the meat boycott can rush to a non-bargain like lemmings going to the sea.

At times like this I want to rise up and call for fair play. But then I realize that actually no one has cheated. I also want to make a plea for consumer education, but no one can make someone take the time to stop and read prices and labels.

SO I BECOME a very private shopper once again, playing one aisle by grams, the next by ounces, and remembering from week to week what I pay for those frequently purchased products.

In our neighborhood and over the bridge table I often hear complaints about prices and gimmicks. But I have come to realize that when you complain, the world complains with you but when you shop, you shop alone.

Karen Thompson joins Suburban Living

Karen Thompson has been named to the staff of Suburban Living to fill the vacancy created when Dorothy Oliver was appointed city editor of the Des Plaines Herald.

Miss Thompson, who has been a copy-editor since joining Paddock Publications in August of 1970, will write special feature articles and handle women's news in the Des Plaines office of The Herald. She will assume her duties there July 23, following an orientation period in the Arlington Heights office of the Heralds.

A graduate of Wisconsin State University at Oshkosh, Miss Thompson had experience with The Paper of Oshkosh and the Courier-Hub of Soughton, Wis., her hometown, before she joined the staff of the Heralds. She now resides in Schaumburg.

Eleanor Rives, who has been handling women's news in the Des Plaines office since the promotion of Mrs. Oliver to city editor, will continue in that office as special feature writer and also assist Miss Thompson with women's news.

They will be married in June, 1974.

Orchid, avocado, orange spark Palatine wedding

Orchid, avocado and burnt orange accents surrounded Kim Marie Shepley of Palatine as she stood at the altar of St. Theresa's Catholic Church on June 9.

Her attendants wore ivory victorian gowns printed in a small floral pattern of the colors. They complemented the dresses with orchid picture hats and nosegay bouquets of burnt orange carnations and orchid straw flowers tied with avocado ribbons.

Kim became the bride of Chuck Wegrzyn of Chicago in a 2:30 p.m. ceremony that was followed by a reception at Palatine Firehall for 250 guests.

DAUGHTER OF Mr. and Mrs. Duane Shepley, 548 N. Stephan Drive, Kim wore a Victorian gown of ivory organza with a double lace ruffle at the hemline. The same Irish lace covered the bodice with its high neckline and full sleeves.

The lace also edged a mantilla veil that Kim wore over her long dark hair. She carried a nosegay of ivory roses with baby's breath.

Denice Pennick of Palatine was maid of honor and Robin Ann Shepley, sister of the bride, and Karen Soderberg, Rolling Meadows, bridesmaids.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Wegrzyn of Chicago, chose Chris Zurek of Chicago as best man. Groomsmen were the couple's brothers, Mike Wegrzyn and Mark Shepley.

ALSO IN the wedding party were Pat and Peter Novak of Chicago, 6-year-old twin cousins of the groom. The two boys were ring bearers.

Kim and Chuck met while working for

Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Wegrzyn

Nuclear Data in Palatine, where she still works part-time. She is a graduate of Fremd High School, attended Harper College for a year and will continue her education at the University of Illinois Circle Campus.

Chuck attended Illinois Institute of Technology and is now with Washington National Insurance Co. in Evanston.

The couple lives in the Rogers Park area of Chicago since returning from a two-week camping trip through the southwest United States and Mexico.

Avoid a burn

Consider the time of day if you decide to sunbathe. Today's Health, publication of the American Medical Association, says the sun's rays are most potent between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., standard time.

The sun is most directly overhead then. You are most likely to tan or burn. There is little chance of getting either if sun exposure is before 8 a.m. or after 4 p.m., standard time. (UPI)

College seniors married

When Cinda Lucille Flom of Palatine goes back to her senior year at Illinois State University in fall, she will be attending classes as Mrs. Donald Eugene Heaberlin. Her bridegroom of June 9 will also be a senior.

Their romance began on the Normal campus and culminated in their recent marriage in Palatine Presbyterian Church at two in the afternoon. Later there was a reception at Mangam's Beverly Lake Restaurant where the couple greeted 150 guests.

Several of their school friends were in the wedding party.

Cinda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Cameron Flom, 256 Boynton Drive, chose a childhood friend, Sharon Luck of Edina, Minn., as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Judy Strealer, Palatine; Diane Brown, Peoria; and the groom's twin sisters, Debbie and Denise Heaberlin of Rockford.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Heaberlin

DONALD IS THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Heaberlin of Rockford. His brother Dennis was his best man, and ushers included a cousin of the bride, Sam Coleman, Charlotte, N.C.; Reginald Johnson and Dan and Jim Torrisi, Rockford; Leonard Kraybor, Palatine; and George Torrisi, Rockford; Leonard Kraybor, Palatine; and George Bowlin, Keokuk, Iowa.

Cinda chose a deep rainbow setting for the candlelight nuptials. Her maid of honor wore a sleeveless gown of ming blue silk organza with ruffled bodice and hem. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow and white daisies, ming blue statice and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids were dressed in identical styles, but in other colorful shades. Judy appeared in hot pink, Diane in purple, Debbie in green and Denise in yellow. They all wore matching Camelot lace headpieces and carried colonial bouquets of yellow and white daisies, blue and purple statice and baby's breath.

THE BRIDE came down the aisle in a white Schiffli lace gown embroidered all over in a pearl clustered motif. The cap sleeves, high neck and chapel train were all edged in scallops.

Cinda's chapel-length veil was triple-tiered and held by a portrait headpiece in Schiffli lace embroidered with pearls. Her bouquet was colonial styled of phalaenopsis, stephanotis, lilies of the valley, carnations, and purple and white statice.

Soloist for the service was Bill Dyszel, a student at Southern Illinois University.

Cinda and Donald spent a week's honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania and are back in Normal living in the Cardinal Courts.

She is a graduate of Palatine High School and her husband of Rockford Boylan High.

Beta Nu greets new officers

Beta Nu chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha International recently installed officers for the coming club year.

Mrs. Margaret Floyd of Hoffman Estates is president; Mrs. Judy Struck, Hanover Park, vice president; Mrs. Mary Polniaszek, Hoffman, secretary; Mrs. Cynthia Bradley, Schaumburg, treasurer; and Mrs. Darlene Raff, Streamwood, educational director.

Ceremonies were also held to make awards to various members. Mrs. Jeanette Manley received the first degree of Pallas Athene, and Mrs. Judy Struck earned the first pearl award. Two members, Mrs. Carol Craft and Mrs. Bonnie Shirk, both of Schaumburg, were welcomed as pledges.

Dear Dorothy: I've seen some attractive soap bars on a rope and have heard this is a good do-it-yourself bit with scraps. Do you know the way it's done?—June Page

You're in business if you have enough scraps, June. Just push all the pieces you've saved through a food grinder and then add a little water so it makes a glop you can mold. Select a rope any length you wish and then mold the bar at the spot you want it to be and in any shape you choose. When it hardens you not only have a conversation piece, but an extremely handy item for a camping trip.

Dear Dorothy: A friend saves egg whites for me as I make angel food cakes. Sometimes it's 10 days to two weeks before I get them. They seem to keep well, but I keep wondering what the maximum time is that they can be stored safely.—Gladys Johnson Stored in a covered jar in a refrigerator, egg whites are supposed to retain their goodness for seven to 10 days. However, if the refrigerator isn't opened too many times in a day, they ought to be all right for two weeks.

Dear Dorothy: We had the stairway carpeting moved so the worn edges wouldn't show. However, the creases are very visible. Is there anything that can be done?—Amy Lewin

Yes. Steam the area with your steam iron, then brush the carpeting. If this doesn't do it all the way, shampooing will help a lot. And finally, wear alone will finish the job.

Dear Dorothy: Do you have to brown a roast that is going to be pot-roasted?—Marian Jellico

I do. I think it gives the roast a better taste.

Gala 73 to benefit out-patients

Music and entertainment will highlight Gala 73, the eighth annual benefit for Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. Scheduled for Saturday, July 21, at the Marriott Motor Hotel, the Gala begins at 6:30 p.m. with a social hour in the Hall of Cities, followed by dinner in the Grand Ballroom at 8.

Headlining the entertainment will be Don Les and the New Harmonicats. Also performing will be comedian Stu Allen and the Chicago Swedish Glee Club. Following the entertainment, there will be dancing in the Hall of Cities with music provided by the Hal Kartun Orchestra and the Jimmy Gross Banjo Band.

PROCEEDS FROM Gala 73 will be channeled to Lutheran General's out-patient clinics. Many clinic patients come from the working poor and have little or no resources to pay for health care. A significant part of the community receives little aid for day-to-day illness or for regular hospitalization. Preventive medicine, such as immunizations ore pre-natal care, is almost non-existent.

The hospital regards its commitment to the clinics as part of its responsibility to provide total health care to the community. The clincs, on the other hand, enhance the hospital's teaching programs, upgrading care for all hospital patients.

The Gala is sponsored by the medical staff, the Service League and the Men's Association of Lutheran General Hospital. Tickets are $32.50 per person. They may be obtained from the hospital.

Bride of naval officer

An afternoon wedding June 10 in Living Christ Lutheran Church, Buffalo Grove, united Nancy Kyle Banser and Lt. j.g. Daniel R. Shaffer. A reception followed at the Commissioned Officers Club at Great Lakes.

Nancy is the daughter of the Harold E. Bansers of 660 Farrington Drive, Buffalo Grove. She attended Adlai E. Stevenson High School and is a junior at Illinois State University, majoring in special education.

Lt. Shaffer is stationed at Jacksonville, Fla., with the U.S. Navy. He is the son of the Robert Shaffers of Paramus, N.J., and studied at Boston University before going into service.

Mrs. Daniel Shaffer

TWO FRIENDS of the bride, Claire Buschmann and Diane Ryndak, were maids of honor for the double ring ceremony. Michele Banser, the bride's sister, and Sue Swanson, another of her friends, were bridesmaids and the couple's young sisters, Kimberly Banser and Maryanne Shaffer, junior bridesmaids.

Also in the wedding procession as ring bearer was the bride's brother Michael.

Lt. j.g. Dennis Spillane served as best man and Tim Shaffer, brother of the groom, Lt. William Kostar and Lt. Toby Buschmann ushered.

They met on Oshkosh campus

A romance on the University of Wisconsin campus at Oshkosh culminated in marriage May 26 for Maureen Ann Fitzpatrick of Wausau, Wis., and Robert Lee Pfrank of Arlington Heights.

Maureen graduated last year in radio, television and journalism, and Bob earned his degree this year in microbiology. He is a '69 graduate of Arlington High School.

Their parents are the James B. Fitzpatricks of Wausau and the J. Francis Pfranks of 1314 E. Clarendon St., Arlington. The newlyweds are living with the Pfranks since their return from a week's honeymoon in Wisconsin.

Each had seven attendants for the noon ceremony in St. Mary's Catholic Church, Wausau.

ANNE M. FLOOD of Eden, Wis., was maid of honor and Thomas A. P. Quid, Arlington Heights, best man.

The bridesmaids included the couple's sisters and Mary Louise Roth of Wausau. Maureen's sisters are Mary Ellen and Colleen Fitzpatrick and Mrs. Jane Ann Fagan of Pittsburgh; Bob's are Shirley Pfrank and Mrs. Sally Olinger, Las Vegas.

Groomsmen were Richard Wiegal and Charles Kaufman, both of Racine, Wis.; Scott Schulke, Oshkosh; Barry Lloyd, Cherryville, Pa.; Robert Salentine, New Berlin, Wis.; and Neal Fagan, Pittsburgh.

A dinner reception followed at Hoffman House in Wausau. Later there was another party in the Fitzpatrick home.

Newcomers plan July 4 float

Little Red Riding Hood and the Cookie Monster will be riding atop the Hoffman-Schaumburg Newcomers Club float at the annual Fourth of July parade in Hoffman Estates.

Theme of the float is "Little Red Riding Hood meets the Cookie Monster" which will feature a life-size monster, the little red hooded child and grandma's house.

Mrs. David Kendall is float chairman, assisted by Mrs. Thomas Bellamy.

The next summer event for the club is a hayride and square dance on Aug. 25. Mrs. George Polkinghorn is taking reservations at 894-2543. The group will also participate in a local Septemberfest on Labor Day weekend.

Newcomers is open to all area residents of two years or less. It aims to get them acquainted with other new families and broaden their social activities.

It's fashion

Monsanto Textiles Co. in October will test market hosiery and pantyhose made with a new bi-constituent nylon and spandex fiber. The hosiery and pantyhose, which will be sold under the Roman Stripe label, offer a combination of sheerness and support never before possible with textured nylon or wrapped spandex yards, said a spokesman for Monsanto. The leg wear will possess the ultra sheerness of aesthetic qualities of conventional hosiery, yet provide comfort and support factors similar to support hose.

Rising into fashion prominence over the past few seasons, chintz becomes the favorite home decorative fabric for the fall. From draperies to bedcovers, it's in. The most popular is a chintz in a polyester, cotton combination — half and half. One big maker of the decorating fabrics, Bloomcraft, says designs down on dark backgrounds will be big. The backgrounds range from navy to eggplant, brown or black. Floral and bird prints are the biggest in the collection. (UPI)

Summer luncheon for AOPi July 11 at Hobson House

The annual summer luncheon of Northwest Suburban Alumnae Chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday, July 11, at the Hobson House in Long Grove. All araa AOPi alumnae are invited to the buffet luncheon and may contact Mrs. Barry Hurtt at 359-7858 for reservations.

The name of Mrs. David Conway of Arlington Heights has been added to the chapter's Rose Honor Roll in recognition of her "outstanding service" to AOPi. Mrs. Conway was honored at the chapter's potluck dinner and received a recognition pin as a memento.

MRS. CONWAY joined the Northwest Suburban Alumnae Chapter in 1969. She immediately took the position of reporter to the sorority's magazine and editor of the chapter's newsletters for two years. She has also been in charge of decorations for numerous AOPi benefits, has modeled in both AOPi and Panhellenic fashion shows and has served as hostess for many AOPi gatherings.

Mrs. Conway is currently serving a two-year term as social chairman of the alumnae chapter. In addition, she has been both rush adviser and social adviser to the AOPi collegiate chapter at Northwestern University.

She affiliated with Alpha Omicron Pi as a student at East Tennessee State University.

Arlington woman reigns as Safe Boating Queen

Mrs. Edna G. Hoehle of Arlington Heights has been named 1973 National Safe Boating Queen for Division 7 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

She was chosen for her poise, personality and charm and also for energetic participation in the auxiliary's aims and projects. Edna is one of the few women Courtesy Motorboat Examiners and is a qualified instructor.

The queen is attended by a five-member court. On it are Adele Kucia of Des Plaines, Bettie Dolderer of Itasca, Louise Alkire of Downers Grove, Shirley Merritt of Bridgeview and Fay Antink of Lombard.

THE QUEEN and her court will reign at National Safe Boating Week activities starting July 7 at William G. Stratton State Park in Morris. The event which opens at 10 a.m., is free to the public.

During the boating season Edna and her husband Lee can be seen aboard their 33-foot cruiser, the Panacea, on the Illinois rivers, promoting boating safety. They instruct public education classes, do auxiliary patrol duty and give courtesy motorboat examinations.

ACTIVITIES for Edna do not stop at the Flotilla and Division levels of the Coast Guard Auxiliary. She is the mother of two Arlington High School graduates, Bob and Eileen, and grandmother of a 3-year-old, Robbie. She also works in the attendance office of Forest View High School.

Mrs. Edna Hoehle

Edna is a member of the Mount Prospect Business and Professional Women's Club and the Dsit. 214 Educational Supportive Personnel.

The American family

Lots of talk...but little laughter

SAN FRANCISCO — With the aid of movie cameras, scientists seeking to learn what makes the American family tick have found a lot of talk, not much laughter and little special zest for living.

The filming has been done by the Family Study station of the University of California Medical Center. Dr. Henry L. Lennard, director of the project, was consulted by the Public Broadcasting System before it made the American Family television series with Pat and Bill Lord.

About 50 families have been filmed by Lennard's staff seeking patterns of family interaction — a subject on which little is known. From the studies, the scientists hope to learn more about how human beings interact in general.

"There has been a theory that people don't talk much in a family setting," says Lennard, a sociologist. "Our data shows there is a lot of talk, a lot of interaction.

"BUT NOT MUCH laughter is going on in the family setting. There aren't many belly laughs. Our most joyful family was all deaf."

Lennard also finds very little physical contact between American family members, including children, in sharp contrast with southern Europeans, for example. In only two of the 50 families was "touching" observed, and Lennard notes "a general lack of intimacy and closeness."

In families including a mental patient to whom tranquilizers are administered, a pattern is developing with worrisome implications for the psychiatrists who prescribe drugs.

The drugs interfere with communication. The patient attempts ineffectively "to be a part of the family action," but tends to be ignored.

If, as family therapists theorize, the patient's basic problem is that he cannot communicate with the family, tranquilizers may be the wrong medicine.

LENNARD CONCEDES that the presence of a camera can alter a family's action, but notes that every investigative technique becomes a factor in the situation. Interviewing family members is a method with just another set of research pitfalls.

"Most people almost forget they are being filmed in the first 15 minutes," says Lennard's associate, Dr. Steven Allen.

The filming takes place in a combination living-dining room and kitchen in which a camera is built in. Each famly brings its own groceries, for which it is reimbursed, and spends the dinner hours.

"We tell them to stay as long as they want," Allen says, "and it would be nice if they clean up."

In Lennard's project, a film is reviewed as many as 30 times, to catch the subtle body movements, bits of family shorthand and little ways people are ignored.

IN SOME FAMILIES, a person does not talk unless he is looking at the other person. If so, it is thought the relationship is unsettled, and the speaker always needs clues about the reaction.

In only two families was any notable zest, any special joy in living, evident.

Among social scientists, Lennard says, great debate is developing over whether the family as an institution remains viable.

Safety glazing in home cuts hazards

Although 20 states now have laws requiring safety glazing in shower and tub enclosure, glass doors, storm doors and wall panels or partitions in homes, most of these laws didn't go on the books before 1969.

And although many contractors voluntarily put safety glazing into these areas, the Consumers Safety Glazing Committee says there are hundreds of thousands of older homes with shower stalls, glass doors and the like made of dangerous ordinary glass.

Such glass hazards in homes and other buildings cause 225,000 accidents a year, some of them fatal. The worst thing, the committee says is that 40 per cent of the accident victims are children under 15.

It only costs $50 to $100 more to put safety glazing in an average new home than ordinary glass. Of course it costs more to replace ordinary glass in an old home's danger spots with safety glazing.

But the committee says even then the cost is trivial compared with the cost of a single accident.

THERE ARE FOUR kinds of safety glazing:

Polycarbonate rigid plsstic made by Rowland Products, Inc., of Kensington, Conn., and General Electric Co. It is 250 times as strong as even laminated safety glass.

Acrylic plastic, made by Rohm & Hass, Inc., of Pittsburgh, under the name Plexiglass. It is five to 20 times as strong as laminated safety glass, according to thickness.

Tempered glass, which is five times as strong as laminated glass.

Laminated glass — the common automobile windshield glass, which is several times stronger than common flat glass.

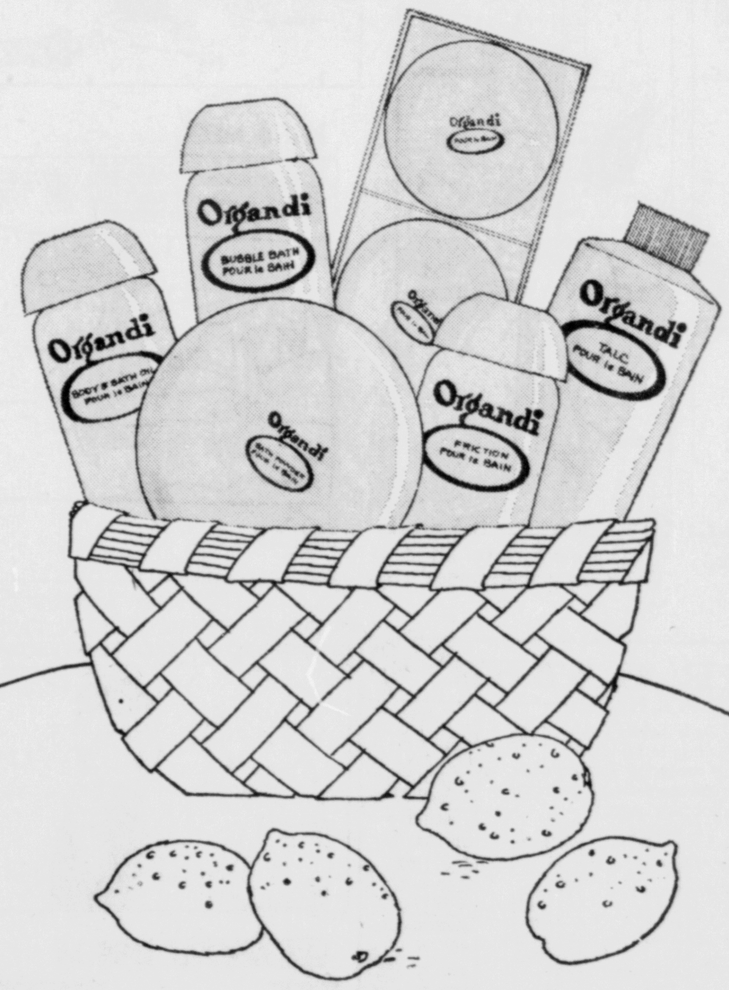

None of these will break up into big shards with murderous cutting edges if people walk or fall into them. Tempered glass must be made to size at the factory before it is tempered. The others can be cut and trimmed on the job. Polycarbonate is the most costly, but its expense is more than justified where the risk is high or there is a vandalism peril.

THE COMMITTEE said transparent glass in dangerous areas always should be decorated with decals so people will see it. And the decals should be large enough to be noticed by children and set at the eye level of small children.

The seriousness of the peril is hard to overstate. In Winfield, Iowa, for example, a six-year-old boy crashed through a glass storm door. His 10-year-old brother, running to tell his parents, stumbled on a broken shard from the door. The six-year-old died and the older cut an artery and was seriously injured.

Million dollar mark reached by salesman

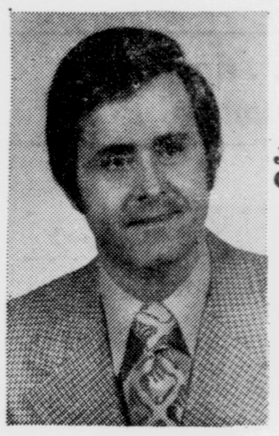

THE GREAT AMERICAN Recreation Center, owned by Joseph Arrigo, (above) has on display in its 18,000 square foot showroom a variety of boats campers, tents and all the accessories.

It was announced recently that Joseph F. Geiger Jr., of Arlington Heights had attained one of the insurance industry's highest achievements, a million dollars of placed business.

Associated with Alfred A. Eppel and Associates in Chicago and the Pan American Life Insurance Company in New Orleans, Louisiana, he is well on his way to top the two million mark for 1973.

Specializing in investment insurance programming and comprehensive programs for businesses, Mr. Geiger recently won first place in 1973 President's month sales campaign with Pan American Life. He also qualified for the company's convention in Hawaii, where he will be a featured speaker.

Joseph Geiger, Jr.

The Alfred A. Eppel and Associates organization serve many financial markets in the Chicagoland area. Services such as estate planning, pension and profit sharing, salary continuation programs, professional incorporation, mutual funds and even a copyrighted split-funded accumulation program.

"Most people have financial problems, and are not aware of how life insurance can help greatly in solving them. I consider it my job to educate and make friends at the same time," Geiger said.

"As a member of the National State and Chicago chapter of the Association of Life Underwriters" Geiger continued, "I try to handle my clientele in a very personal and professional manner."

Elmhurst store caters to sportsmen's needs

The Great American Recreation Center, North Ave. and Elmhurst Rd., in Elmhurst, might well be called "The winter and summer playland for sports equipment," as Joseph Arrigo, owner and president of the sports center, has referred to it.

The Great American Recreation Center boasts a 18,000 square foot showroom for display and sales of all types of recreational and sports equipment. The surrounding seven acres of stoned and fenced in grounds are used for additional merchandise.

The Center sells all types of campers, tents and their accessories and boats, including speedboats, cabin cruisers, sailboats and inflatable rubber boats, to name a few. Boat motors and all the necessary equipment are also sold.

Hockey and ski equipment, as well as sno-mobiles and bikes, both pedal and motorized, are also available at the Great American Recreation Center.

Additional services include painting and servicing of boats and campers, the rental and leasing of camper units and ski lessons in the near future.

With hours to suit everyone, the Great American Recreation Center is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday to 6 p.m. and Sunday 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Reading goods increase sales

According to American Druggist Merchandising, in 1972, drug stores rang up about $351 million in sales of magazines, books and newspapers. That's an increase of 11 percent over the previous year and represents better than a 50 percent jump over the sales volume of these items in 1965.

New management

The Duchess Beauty Salon, 3252 Market Plaza, in Rolling Meadows Shopping Center recently came under new management.

The new owner and manager is Gust Gatsin who brings with him 20 years of experience in the hair fashions field. Gatsin began his career in Athens Greece, before coming to the states. He received special training in coloring and hair styling while in New York. Gatsin was formerly with the Charles A. Stevens beauty salon in Chicago for 17 years before taking over Duchess Beauty Salon.

Gatsin's salon uses the most modern techniques in hairstyling that appeal to young and old alike. Air blown cuts, curling iron techniques, frosting and sun streaking are included in the many facets of beauty work performed by the salon's nine beauticians.

The Duchess Beauty Salon is open seven days a week. The hours are Monday and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday until 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Color TV sales on the increase

Color TV's huge growth in 1972 is going to be dwarfed by the anticipated increase this year. The results of a Merchandising Week Research Department survey of foreign and domestic manufacturers call for a whopping 30.5 percent increase in total color TV sales to 11,540,000 units against 8,844,000 units in 1972.

The survey also indicates that the shift in color TV screen size to portables will continue strong with 15-inch and under taking 15 percent (up one percent), 16-inch to 20-inch grabbing 47 percent (up one percent) and 20-inch and over accounting for 38 percent of the color market (down two percent). Retailers can expect that approximately three units out of every five they sell will be in the under-20-inch portable category.

WALTER MADRAK (left), service manager at Woodfield Ford, 815 East Golf Road, Schaumburg, receives a Silver Medallion Manager Award plaque from J. L. Yung, manager of Ford Customer Service Division's Chicago district. The award is presented annually to only 15 per cent of Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealership service managers across the country. They are judged on the basis of outstanding performance in customer service, sales and management ability. The award includes an all-expense paid weekend vacation for two to a well-known resort.

New facilities for dealership

Roselle-American auto dealership, presently located at 25 S. Park in Roselle will be moving to a new and larger location at 920 W. Golf Rd. in Schaumburg on August 1. The dealership will also undergo a name change and do business as Roselle AMC-Jeep.

The 6.4 acre facility in Schaumburg will be the largest AMC dealership in the Midwest. The outlet will have on its premises $1,000,000 worth of cars — about $700,000 new and $300,000 used.

The dealership will contain a separate building for used car transactions in addition to its two story main building for new car sales and servicing. The dealership will employ between 50 and 55 persons.

Drug store rents convalescent aids

Rolling Meadows Drugs in Rolling Meadows Shopping Center is a full service drug store that is equipped to meet the pharmaceutical and convalescent needs of area residents.

The store employs three registered pharmacists and has a 24-hour answering service which takes prescription calls. Prescriptions are filled the following morning. Rolling Meadows Drugs also has a free delivery service for its customers.

For those convalescing, the drug store carries a complete line of convalescent aids which may either be purchased or rented.

According to Jerry Mytyk, owner of Rolling Meadows Drugs, plans for store remodeling are underway. Included in the plans is an enlarged cosmetic section. A punch card system will afford customers purchasing credit. A fully punched card is worth cash on the customer's next purchase.

Store hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., Saturday to 9 p.m. and Sunday and holidays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Casual furniture sells well within big youth market

Casual furniture and ecology oriented giftware lines are being touted as hot prospects for department stores this year. Many home furnishings merchandise managers at the National Retail Merchants Association's annual conference held recently in New York cited the two classifications as major growth areas in the hard goods field in terms of both sales and profit potential.

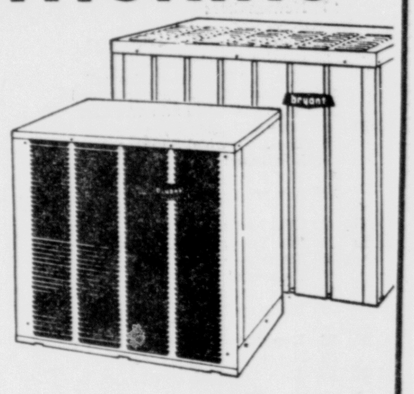

Casual furniture, the retail executives noted, takes a variety of forms these days — knock-down, plastic, chrome and glass and inflatable. Retailers agree that casual furniture should attract the big youth market and fit in nicely with the trend to apartment dwelling that is currently in evidence.

Arlington legion team takes charge in Ninth District

by JIM COOK

Winning and losing coaches alike frequently "replay" a recently concluded baseball game and search for the turning point — the base hit, error, mental lapse — that directly accounted for the outcome.

For Arlington Heights Post 208 coach Lloyd Meyer and Mount Prospect head man Merv Fink, the task was an easy one Friday night following Arlington's 1-0 victory in a well-played, emotionally-intense Ninth District clash.

Arlington's fourth win without a loss left it alone in first place.

The focus of both coaches would have synchronized in the bottom of the fifth inning of the scoreless battle. Prospect's Keith Semar had just coaxed a pass off Arlington southpaw Tom Good and pinch-hitting Ed Katzman advanced his teammate to second with a perfectly-executed sacrifice bunt.

With one out, leadoff man Loren Crites answered the challenge with his third straight hit — a single to center that was complicated further when the ball eluded the Arlington outfielder, permitting Crites second base and Semar to cross unmolested with what apparently was the game's first tally.

But before Jim Anderson could dig in as Mount Prospect's next hitter, Good, working from the stretch, appealed to third base in a mechanical argument that meant he didn't think Semar touched the base turning for home.

The plate umpire upheld the appeal and Mount Prospect's run was erased from the book, maintaining a scoreless duel.

The momentum swung sharply to Arlington and in the defending state champions' ensuing turn at bat, it pecked away off fireballing Larry Monroe for the clinching tally.

Bob Harth, after connecting for two previous hits, earned a leadoff walk and was boosted to second on pinch-hitting Ken Kallberg's sacrifice bunt.

Mark Leonhard, who had walked and fanned in two previous trips, got around late on a Monroe fastball and sent a bullet to rightfield that cleared the fence on one bounce to automatically score Harth as the play went for a ground-rule double.

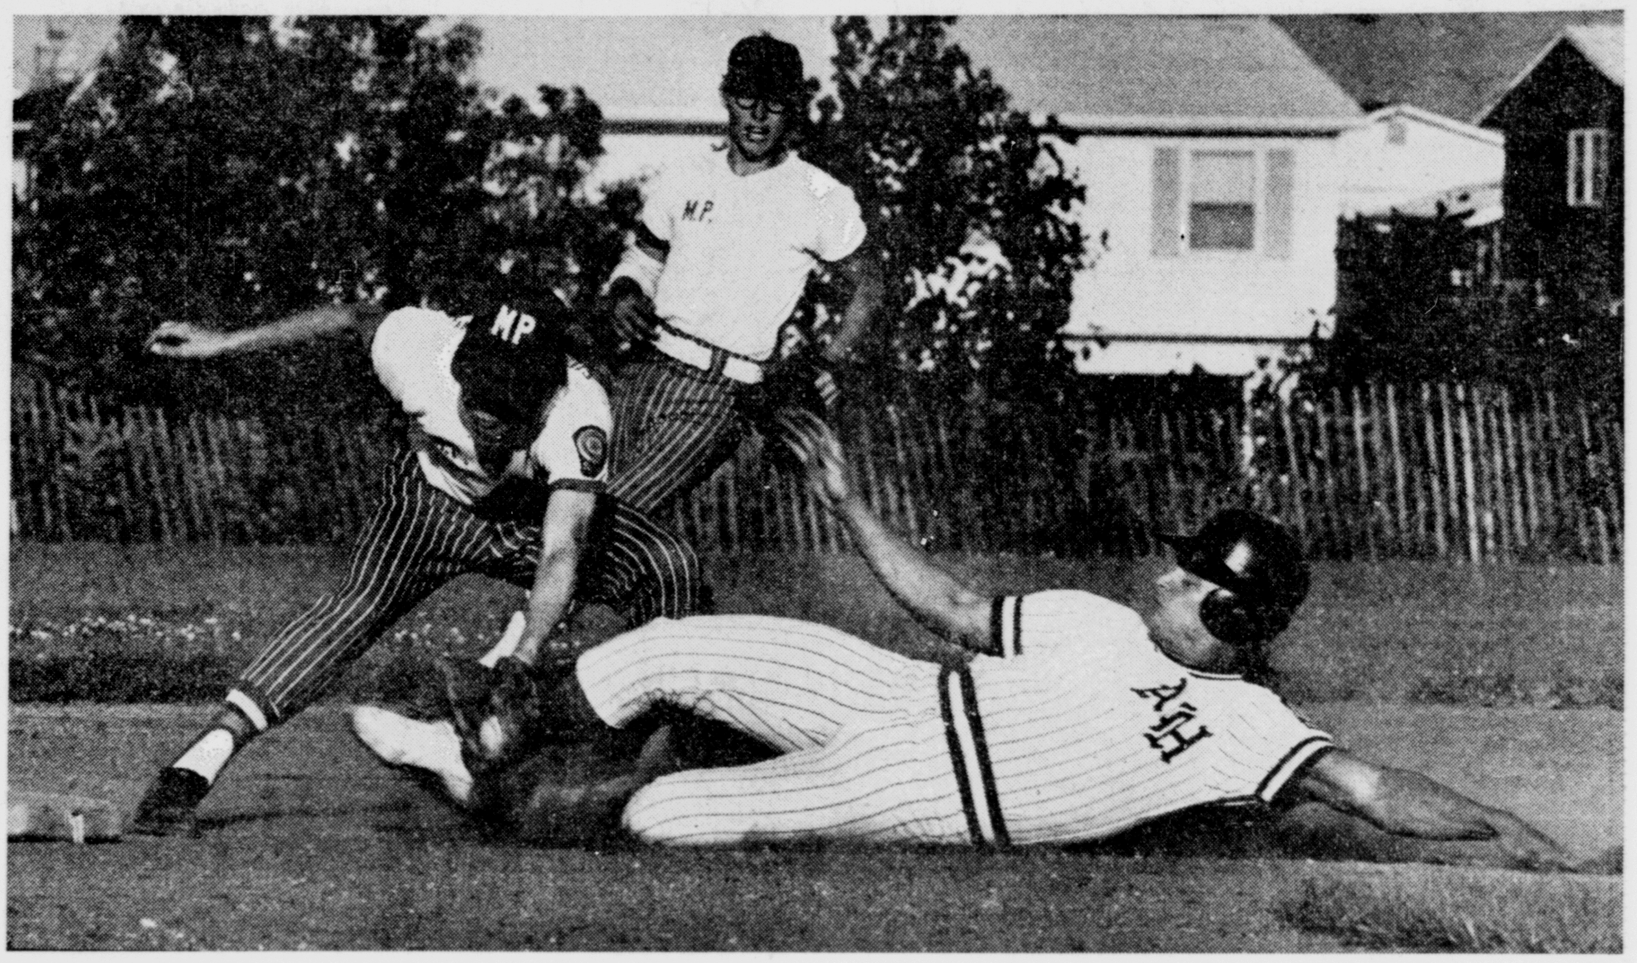

One out later, Rick Sidor used the same ploy and sent another shot to right, but quick hustle by Prospect rightfielder Gregg Fink and two perfect relay throws nailed Leonhard at the plate.

Arlington's Jim Hopkins came on in the sixth to preserve the decision for Good, making Monroe the heart-break loser. Good, a Hersey product, pitched superbly over the initial five frames, walking three, fanning four and allowing just four hits. Hopkins permitted only one baserunner over the final two frames — that the result of an error.

In defeat, Monroe passed four, whiffed eight and was touched for just five hits.

'Greg Luzinski Day' in Chicago Thursday

Area residents will get a chance to honor a local boy who is making it big in the major leagues — Greg Luzinski — when the Philadelphia Phillies invade Wrigley Field this Thursday.

Organized by Prospect Heights barber Jim Seveska, a group of "possibly 500" will gather at about 10 a.m. in a roped-off area of the left field grandstands to talk with and present a plaque of appreciation to the Phillie star.

Roy Swanson, president of the Little League in which Luzinski played as a youngster in the suburbs, will make the presentation. Seveska himself cannot attend the festivities due to business commitments, but he will be represented by Ray Worsley, who also is a merchant in the Prospect Heights Old Town Shopping Association of which Seveska is president.

"This is just an idea I cooked up in my mind to do," Seveska said over the weekend. "We want to honor a local boy who has helped put Prospect Heights on the map.

"We are expecting about 400 Little Leaguers and another hundred or so parent and family groups to turn out and honor Greg," Seveska said. "Greg will be up in the stands for about a half hour or 45 minutes. Greg has been very cooperative. This is a chance to get out and pay a little tribute to him."

Luzinski's "day" will take place on the last day of the current Cub homestand.

Post 208, Leonhard blank Wheeling

Wheeling's Ken Roggenbuck pitched a great ballgame but Mark Leonhard's was even better, as the Arlington Heights hurler struck out 11 and gave just two hits in Thursday's 1-0 win.

Arlington Post 208 tallied one run in the home sixth at Recreation Park. Leonhard made it stand up, finishing the game with two strikeouts. He opened the seventh by making Ron Henricks pop to shortstop Allie Wicchers.

Leonhard gave hits, both singles to Pat McGinn in the third and Bob Burke an inning later. He set Wheeling down on strikeouts in the fifth, sandwiched around his only walk. Leonhard struck out two men apiece in the third, fourth and seventh.

Roggenbuck gave only three hits, two of them by George Vukovitch. He singled in the first and doubled home Wiechers in the seventh. Wiechers received one of three Roggenbuck walks. Wheeling's hurler had four strikeouts.

Post 208's other hit was a third inning single by Marc Klemp. He moved around to third but never scored.

Roggenbuck got in trouble without yielding a hit in the fourth. He opened the inning by walking Vukovitch who reached base every time he batted.

Vukovitch stole second, moved down to third on Leonhard's sacrifice and tried to score after Bruce Hansen's line fly to right. He was cut down, Terry Kukla to Pat McGinn.

That was Arlington's last threat until the sixth, although Jeff Dillon walked to open the fifth but got no further.

Wiechers opened the sixth with a walk and stayed put when Bob Harth became Roggenbuck's third strikeout. Vukovitch followed with his run-scoring double.

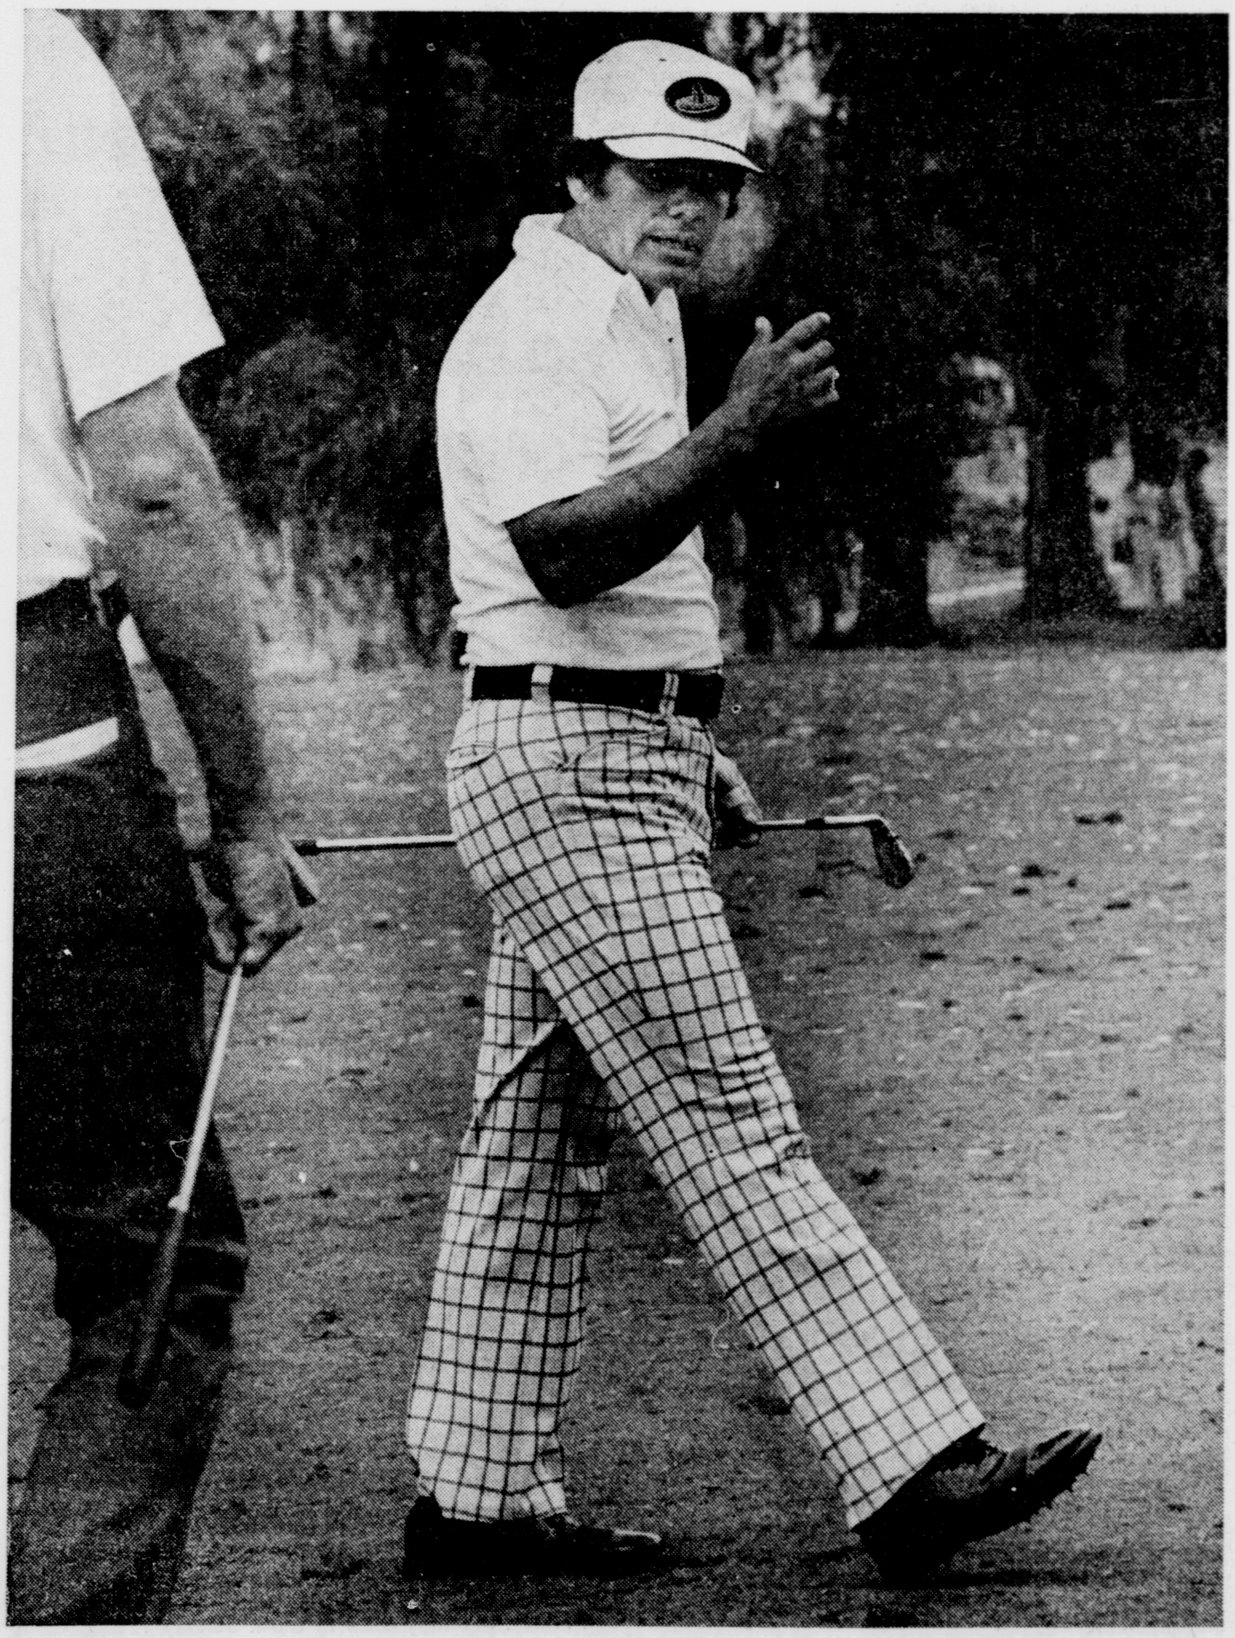

Wheeling got out of the inning with a double play, Leonhard striking out and Vukovitch being cut down stealing, McGinn to third baseman Burke.

Leonhard let just one man reach second. After one out in the sixth, John Theriault bounced to Arlington shortstop Wiechers who erred. Theriault stole second but died there when Kukla and Keith Steelman popped to second baseman Klemp.

Arlington came away from the win with a 6-4 season record. To that point, Lloyd Meyer's club had won six of its last seven after an 0-3 start.

Bucks hold league lead

Hoffman, Schaumburg get jolts in Babe Ruth action

So far, there's no Secretariat emerging out of the pack in the horse race known at the Irving Lake Babe Ruth Senior League.

Things became even tighter on Friday when perennial champion Hoffman Estates lost for the third time and Schaumburg, emerging as a contender earlier in the week, slipped, too.

HANOVER STUNS HOFFMAN

The Hoffman Bucks dropped a 7-6 decision to Hanover Park for the second time this season despite the big day by Bill Gawron, who was 3-for-4 with four runs batted in at Conant High School.

After battling back twice to tie at 3-3 and 6-6, a two-base error by Hoffman in the sixth set up the team's third loss in 11 tries. However, heading into yesterday's game with Streamwood, Manager Lou Bocci's team held the league lead. Both teams were scheduled to go at it again this evening at 6:00.

Gawron singled in one in the first with Marty Bernau driving in another in the second. An error in the second helped the Bucks tie the score.

Down 6-3 after 2½ innings, Hoffman posted one in the bottom of the third (a one-run double by Gawron) and two in the fourth (a two-run single by Mr. Gawron).

"We've had a lot of bad breaks but we've had a few going our way for the past two years, too," said Bocci. "I guess time tends to even things out."

However, he added that he didn't have a full team for that game and wouldn't be complete for a while.

Hoffman made five errors — probably a new team record for one game, according to Bocci.

SCHAUMBURG SHOCKED

Schaumburg manager Homer Homer probably thought he would be helping out both his Cardinals and the Hoffman Bucks with a big win over Streamwood, one of the top contenders for this summer's league title. The reason — his Cards held a 6-1 lead after four innings.

It wasn't to be, however, as Streamwood came up with eight in the fifth and sixth for a 9-6 victory.

Ray Kralicek started on the mound for Schaumburg, but left after five innings. John Mittvick relieved him and couldn't finish the sixth. Streamwood erupted for five in that frame and took the lead for good. Randy Anderson pitched the last out of the inning and finished up the seventh. Mittvick took the loss.

Anderson, who led the team in hitting, drove in the first three runs with a two-run double in the first and a hit-and-run single in the third.

Herb Rabe singled in the fourth run in the three-run fourth inning. Rich Kuchnia tripled in another and Art Abraham singled in the final talley.

1st district victory to Logan Square

Jim Dumke weaved a four-hitter and Logan Square's bats finally regained some life as the Lions knocked off Park Ridge 4-3 Thursday at Maine South and finally got into the Ninth District win column.

The four runs scored by Logan Square is one better than their aggregate through five previous league losses.

Dumke faced just five batters over the minimum and looked extremely sharp in every inning except the second when Park Ridge reached him for three runs. He gave up his only walk and wild pitch and two of the four hits in that inning. In the other six innings, Dumke struck out five, walked none, gave up two hits and had only one runner advance past first base.

The clubs matched three-run second innings and Logan Square won it in the fourth on catcher Tom Chapman's sacrifice fly. The Lions opened the inning when Pat Rooney, the day's big hitter with three-for-three including two doubles, hit a deep two-bagger to center but was thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple.

Then Dumke drew a base on balls and went to third when Jim Bucaro was safe as Park Ridge third baseman Charlie Fahrner committed a two-base throwing error. Chapman then lifted his sacrifice fly to right with Dumke tallying what proved to be the winning run.

Bucaro's three-run homer in the second had given Logan Square a short-lived advantage. Rooney had doubled to left and Dumke had walked before Bucaro stepped up and blasted Post 247 pitcher Jerry Jones' high fastball deep over the left field fence.

Park Ridge's three-run outburst occurred when Mike McDonnell was safe on a fielder's choice, Jones walked, Bill Aimers' singled to right scoring McDonnell, Dumke wild pitched Jones home, and Mike Snider's line single to center scored Aimers.

Park Ridge mounted a mild threat in the fifth when Dan McDonnell tripled with one out. But Dumke got Bob Lloyd and Fahrner both to bounce out in the infield.

Aimers was the defensive star of the game with two tremendous diving catches and a running over-the-shoulder grab of Chapman's sacrifice fly in right field.

'Cats, Cards post wins

Paced by the four-hit, 13 strikeout performance of lefty Willie Kozel, Wheeling defeated visiting Hersey, 4-1 Thursday in an abbreviated Summer League schedule that also saw Arlington win 10-4 over Maine South.

After both teams had scored tainted runs — Hersey's on a wild pitch and Wheeling's on an error — the Wildcats took charge with a three-run rally in the fifth to continue their winning ways.

Kozel hammered in the winning run with a triple. Carl Pfister and Al Newman singled in one each.

SEVERAL STARS

Maine South, no-hit the first four innings by Dennis, erupted for three runs in the fifth to take a 3-0 lead over hosting Arlington. But George Vukovich took charge in that inning, both on the mound and at the plate, to help start the turnaround. And Bruce Heitbrink made the reversal complete with a grand slam home run.

Arlington scored seven times in the fifth in posting its fourth win in nine starts. Vukovich led off with a triple and was singled home by Matt Splitt. Following a couple of run-scoring singles by Ward Schell and Jay Colloton, another man reached base and set up the crushing blow by Heitbrink.

Team 13 earns tournament spot

Team No. 13 of Tony Krolack, Stan Luczak, Tom Damon, and Lee Rischall will represent the Buffalo Grove Men's League in the Paddock Publications tournament.

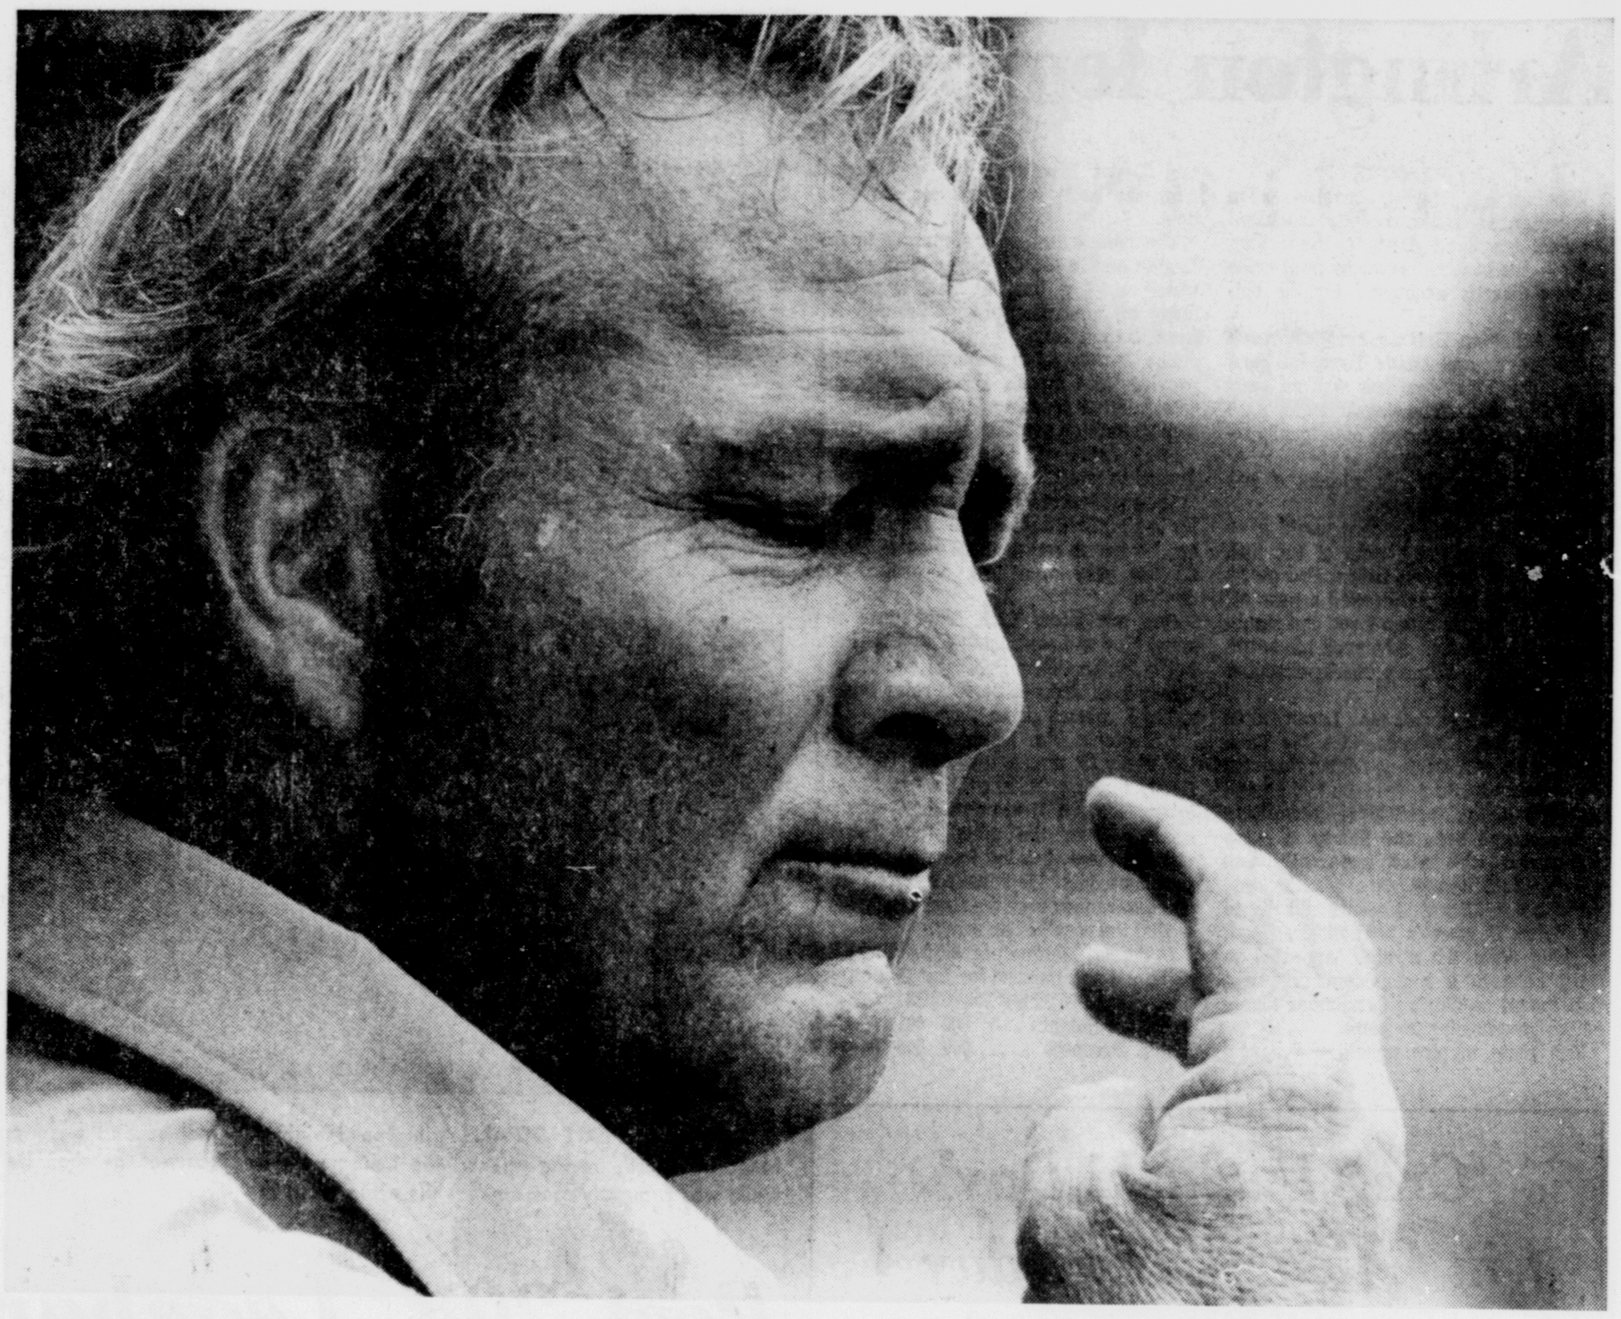

That was determined after the latest action which found Team 13 finishing the first half with 143 points, and a bulge of six over runnerup Team 11.

Making up the second place team is Bob Lorenz, Tim Baldwin, Ron Jakubowski, and Bill Tranberg. They qualified for the championship playoffs with their second place finish.

Flight leaders were John Andrup in 'A' with low gross and net of 39-7-32; Marv Hansman in 'B' with 38-7-31; Gene Murmn in 'C' with 45-14-31; Jim Rocks in 'D' with 46-13-33; and John Diana and Larry Doyle in 'sub' flights. Diana shot 41-6-35, and Doyle had 46-16-30.

Team standings:

NO SWEAT? Western Open champion of 1961 and '63 Arnold Palmer wipes away the pressure as he tries to win still another tournament last week at Midlothian Country Club. This living legend made the cut, but the Herald area's only entrant — Billy Ventresca — just missed.

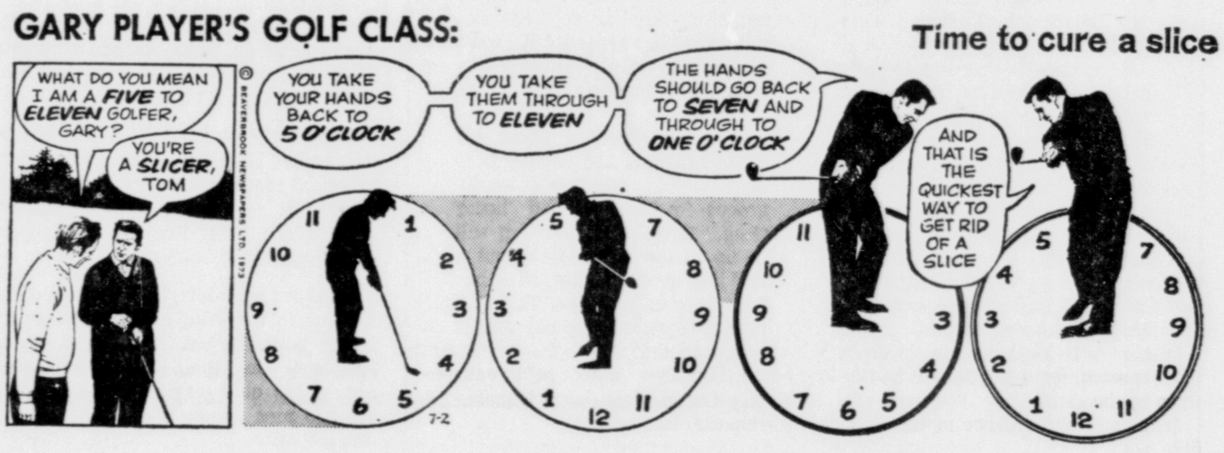

Mufich Buick opens lead over Kewik

John Mufich Buick leads Kewik's Carpet Center, 45-39½, after latest competition in the Mount Prospect Monday Twilight Golf League last week.

Remaining standings are Meeske's Supermarket 39, Shearson Hamill & Co. 39, Mount Prospect Electrical Construction 39, Striking Lanes 38, Picket Paint 38, Mullins Real Estate 31½, Mount Prospect Savings & Loan 31½, Winkelmann's Service 29, Mount Prospect Jewelers 28½ and The Gift Box 22.

Art Carlson, Walt Peterson, Gus Knaack, Carl Lenz, Jim Lesh and Mel Netzell recorded birdies in Monday, June 23 play.

Low gross honors went to Carlson and Ward Oliver who came in with 38's. Low net honors were by Stan Peterson who had a 41 gross and 11 handicap for 30 net.

Kunkel retains lead on Toyota

Kunkel Realtors with 33½ points has a slim one-half point edge over Arlington Toyota after latest results in the YMCA Twilight Golf League. Just behind, with 32 points, is the Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights.

Remaining team standings are Allen's Men's Store 29, Kre-Ken Patterns 26, B & H Blueprints 25½, Hal Lieber Trophies 24, Hilliker Associates 24, Mount Prospect State Bank 22½ and Keefer Roofing 20½.

The best individual won-loss record thus far is by Dick Hoyt who's undefeated in seven matches. Fred Heisler owns one tie and Art King one loss, both also in seven matches.

From last week's scoring, low gross honors were Ed Nixon 39 over par 36, Wally Busch 40 over par 35 and Bruce Campbell 40 over par 35.

Low net honors were Dale Janssen 31 over par 35, Harold Schlichting 31 over par 35 and Cliff Stock 31 over par 36.

Birdies were recorded by Bruce Campbell, Milt Koehler and Wally Bush on the ninth holes plus Nick Knuth on the 12th.

Three golfers tie with low gross 38

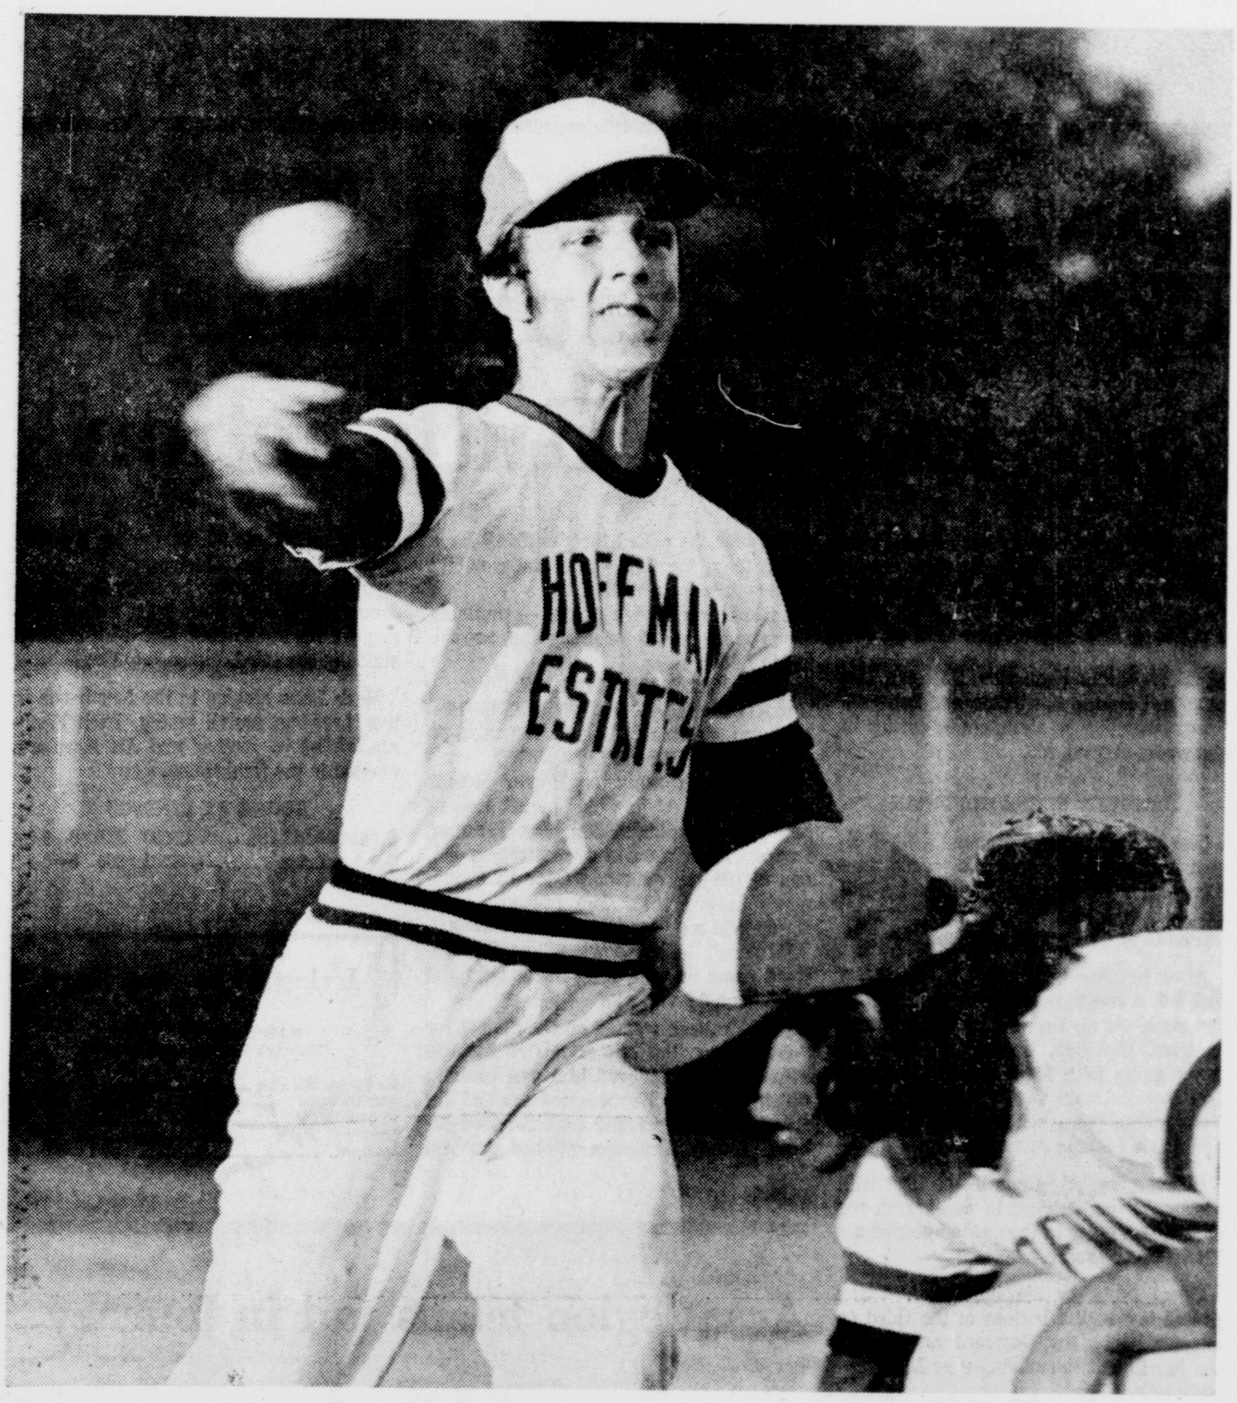

Chuck Lynch of Mount Prospect State Bank, Bert Johanson of Des Plaines Volkswagen and Farrell Shaftel of Century Supply shared honors for low gross in recent Mount Prospect Friday Nite Golf League play.

Each had a 38 shot gross. Johanson also had the evening's low net total with 31.

Birdies were shot by Stan Grabarek on the first, Bernard Drew on the third and Dick Wood on the ninth holes. Back nine birdies were by Ron Risso on 10, John Heinz on 11, Johanson on 12, 17 and 18, Bob Gibb on 13, Shaftel on 13 and 18, Harold Lins on 15, Ray Downing on 13 and Bob Bracken on 17.

Team standings after Friday, June 22, were Mount Prospect State Bank 44.8, Busse Liquor 44.0, Clayton Courts Apartments 42.2, S & H Packaging 41.5, Keefers 41.5, Century Supply 40.8, Mount Prospect Pizza 37.5, Lauterburg and Oehler 37.0, Des Plaines Volkswagen 36.0, FBK 35.2, Bainbridge Apartments 34.3 and Paramount Tool 32.2.

Members of the first place team are Chuck Lynch, Ronald Krahn, Ray Downing and Bob Swyter.

EVERYTHING HE'S GOT. Hoffman Estates third baseman Marty Bernau puts everything he's got plus a little more behind his throw as pitcher Ken Gast ducks low during last week's 3-0 loss to Schaumburg. Lopsided games (18-1, 11-0 & 11-0) in prep league

Clubbing home 17 runs in the first three innings, Wheeling's potent offensive machine romped to an 18-1 victory over visiting Prospect Friday.

In other Summer Baseball League action, it was Barrington over Arlington, Fenton over Elk Grove, Fremd over Hersey, Maine South over Rolling Meadows and Forest View over Schaumburg.

'CATS DEVASTATE KNIGHTS

Surprisingly enough, the Wildcats of Coach Ron DeBolt trailed after half an inning, 1-0, because of the one-run double by Mark Keane.

Then it happened — three in the bottom of the first, with back-to-back seven-run innings.

Wheeling received all the runs needed for victory on Al Newman's two-run homer. He also had a two-run double.

Other top hitters who paced the 'Cats 13-hit attack were George Kaage with three hits and four RBIs and Howie Brauer with two and three, respectively.

Kevin Gough — a hard-luck hurler his last outing when Dundee scored eight runs in one inning off him after two were out — rode the enormous lead to victory this time. Another Kevin — Kelley of Prospect — took the loss.

tering the pitching decision over Gary Gustafson.

Three Hersey errors brought in Fremd's single tally in the first before a five-run second inning surge. Kraft homered to right center for the first run, Jeff Brisson's triple drove in two more and Jeff Hanisch's homer scored Brisson ahead of him.

Steve Dwyer started the third inning with a single but was forced by Mitch Gullett. Gullett went to second on an error and tallied on Gahab's single.

Three more Vikes scored in the fifth when Dwyer's single, Gullett's walk and Kraft's base hit loaded the bases. Two runs scored when Gahab bounced into a fielder's choice but the ball was thrown away for an error, and then another error allowed Kraft to score.

Bob Burke singled in the sixth, went to second on a wild pitch and came around on Mark Otteman's hit.

Hersey collected just four hits and played what head coach Harvey Foster bemoaned as "our worst game of the summer."

DARRAS SLAMS SAXONS

Forest View rode the grand slam of Frank Darras to victory over hosting Schaumburg, 13-5.

Darras unloaded in the third inning as the Falcons scored five times.

After taking a 7-0 lead, Schaumburg came back with four in the sixth, three coming across on Joe Hannon's three-run homer. However, a six-run seventh ended any thoughts of a total comeback by the Saxons.

Ken Meek tossed a four-hitter to gain the victory. Ray Fairbanks was the losing pitcher.

MUSTANGS CLIPPED BY RALLY

Rolling Meadows rushed out to a 4-0 lead after four innings of a Summer League baseball clash with Maine South, but the Hawks returned the battering with one of their own in a decisive four-run seventh inning that tagged the Mustangs with a 7-5 loss.

Meadows jumped on Maine South starter Dave Patterson for a big three-run barrage in the second and added another in the fourth before Maine South retaliated with three in the fifth.

The Mustangs increased their margin to 5-3 after five and needed just three outs in the seventh without incident to preserve the victory.

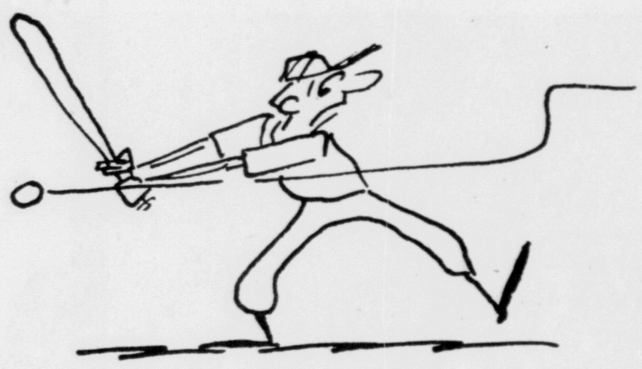

But the Hawks got a two-run single by Keith Zebd and a booming home run by Dave Hood with one aboard to wipe out the deficit and take a 7-5 command.

SAFE AT SECOND. Hoffman Estates' Jeff Ironsides piles safely into second base in last Wednesday's 3-0 loss to Schaumburg. Dan Gallagher awaits the throw as Art Abraham moves in to back up the play. Ironsides reached when catcher Sam Aiello dropped his infield pop. Schaumburg's Tony Aiello tossed a no-hitter at Hoffman Estates.

BARRINGTON BELTS CARDS

Arlington has to be as shellshocked as Prospect after experiencing both a no-hitter and an 11-run, 11-hit attack dished out by hosting Barrington.

Trailing only 2-0 after three, Barrington exploded for nine in the fourth to wrap up the game.

Arlington only had two runners reach first, both on walks — Scott Rudin in the second and Tom Guetner in the fifth.

Terry Gray was the losing pitcher. He went the distance, striking out five.

ELK GROVE FALLS

A sloppy fifth inning cost Elk Grove its game against Fenton as the Grenadiers lost 7-3.

The match was knotted at 3-3 heading into the bottom of the fifth. The first two Fenton batsmen were retired, but then a walk, two passed balls, another walk, a stolen base, a single and a double steal pushed two runners across and gave Fenton a lead they never relinquished.

Elk Grove scored first by posting two in the third on the first of Glenn Stromberg's two base hits, Steve Sheridan's double, David Ray's infield hit that scored Stromberg, and a passed ball which allowed Sheridan to tally.

After Fenton notched a three-spot in the third, Elk Grove tied it in the fourth as Barry Haaft walked and was forced by Jeff Rezzuto. Rezzuto then stole second and was singled home by Mike Dill.

Steve Kliff worked four innings for the Grens and reliever Rick Eckardt was saddled with the defeat.

Hockey schools available at Ice Spectrum

The Palatine Amateur Hockey Association has available a limited number of one-week hockey schools at the Arlington Ice Spectrum. These schools are part of the ice rental commitment the P.A.H.A. has made for the 1973-74 hockey season.

Applications are now available at the Palatine Park District Office, 262 E. Palatine Road. Registrations will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis. The cost of the schools for the P.A.H.A. boys will be $35 per week or one-half the regular cost offered by the Arlington Ice Spectrum, payable at registration.

The schools, dedicated to teaching hockey, started on Monday and will run consecutively for 10 weeks. The Ice Spectrum will do everything possible to schedule all applicants according to their preference but may have to change some dates in order to accommodate all persons registered.

Carol Cichon of Wheeling selected as show hostess

Carol Cichon of 18 E. Willow Rd., Wheeling, has been selected as the Official Hostess for the 13th Annual DuPage Air Show presented by the Antique Airplane Assn., Greater Chicago Area, Inc., to be held at the DuPage County Airport the weekend of July 7-8.

Ms Cichon was selected on the basis of her active participation in general aviation as a pilot, holding a single-engine rating license, and her continuing career interest in aviation as a Flight Attendant with American Airlines for the past five years.

Carol became interested in private aviation when she was taken on a flight in a light plane by a friend. A new perspective and excitement in flight was realized and she began taking flying lessons shortly thereafter.

Carol received her pilot's license a year ago and now has nearly 100 flying hours to her credit. She aspires to achieve multi-engine, instrument and then a commercial license rating.

Carol has experimented in aerobatic flight and also enjoys glider flying, realizing "a great satisfaction in a unique and specialized skill." When not actually in the air, she does a lot of "hangar flying," visiting Chicago area private airports, talking with pilots and checking out other aircraft.

As her professional flying career allows her to travel extensively, Carol has become an avid art collector, culling the many offerings of painting and sculptures of the many countries she visits.

Palatine Hockey finalizes plans for upcoming season at Spectrum

The Palatine Amateur Hockey Association's plans for the Youth Hockey program for 1973-74 season are almost complete. The House League program will be a combination of indoor and outdoor games and practices.

The Mites, (7 and 8 years old) are scheduled for 30 indoor sessions at the Arlington Ice Spectrum. The first half of the season, the Mites will play and practice on "half-ice" to give the boys more ice time while they are schooled in the fundamentals of the game. The second half of the season the boys will play in full-ice games.

The Squirts, (9 and 10 years old), Pee Wees, (11 and 12), Bantams, (13 and 14), Midgets, (15 and 16) will have 22 indoor sessions at the Arlington Ice Spectrum. These sessions will be a combination of practices and games.

At the end of the indoor season, there will be a playoff in each House League Division. All teams will participate in a single-elimination playoff to determine a play-off winner.

The Arlington Ice Spectrum has undertaken the responsibility of providing fully qualified coaches for all house teams and referees for each game. Carl Davis and Jerry Dunn of the Spectrum will handle arrangements. Additionally, the P.A.H.A. will have two outdoor rinks that will allow supplemental practice sessions and games during the natural ice season.

Although fees have not been finalized, they will be in line with last season's fees. Registration dates have not been set.

The Board of Directors would like to express its appreciation to the Arlington Ice Spectrum, specifically owner, Carl Davis, and manager, Jerry Dunn, for their help in setting up this program.

Traveling Team program plans are not complete at this time but should be finalized soon.

This season, each boy registered with the P.A.H.A. will receive an identification card which will allow him to skate at the Spectrum during public skating sessions for $1.00 instead of $1.25 and to have his skates sharpened for $1.00 instead of $1.25.

Secretariat wins 41,223 'new' fans

HE CAME to Arlington Heights for the $125,000 Arlington Park Invitational.

HE SAW an outclassed, three-horse entry and an overflow crowd.

HE CONQUERED the field of My Gallant, Our Native and Blue Chip Dan by nine lengths and the hearts of 41,223 hysterically-cheering fans by a much greater margin.

Secretariat, perhaps the horse of the century, ignited a premature fireworks display with rocket-like artistry that scorched the track's mile and one-eighth main course in 1:47 — just one-fifth of a heartbeat off the record by Damascus in 1967.

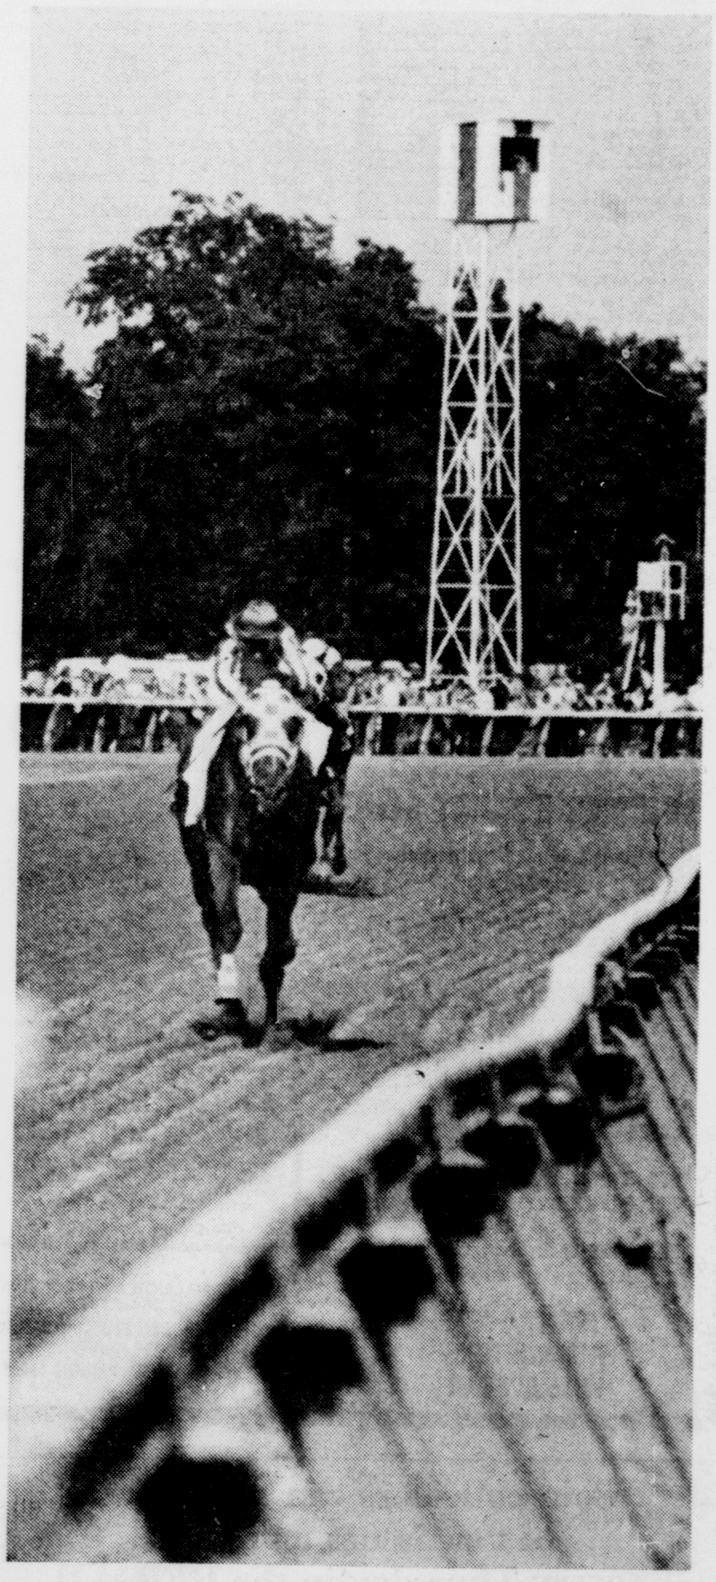

Throughout his dramatic run, the living Triple Crown legend demanded and received the staccato applause from all onlookers who gushed to restraining barriers in both the grandstand and infield alike.

The brilliant chestnut, owned by Ms. Penny Tweedy, trained by Lucien Laurin and ridden by Ron Turcotte, will always be the Champion of Champions in the eyes of Saturday's worshipers.

Pennant fever takes its toll in Arlington Park infield as fans can't bear to envision an upset.

Do you think you're normal? Here're some mental tips

by ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — A "normal" person is able to find outlets for his skills and get recognition for what he has to offer. This is one of the definitions of normality which a Scottish psychiatrist recommends the average man consider when he is wondering about how well-balanced he is.

Dr. H. J. Walton, professor of psychiatry at the University of Edinburgh, gave some pointers in determining mental attitudes in a new publication, "Know Your Own Mind," published by the British Medical Association.

KNOWLEDGE OF what constitutes a state of mental health — or mental stress — he said, can lead to greater understanding of oneself and of one's fellow men. The "normal" person, he went on, also corresponds more or less to these measurements:

• Self-judgment — a normal person does not belittle himself or overestimate himself.

• Adjustments — a normal person accepts things as they come and makes the best of them. He does not pine in daydreams for a happier state.

• Independence — A normal person manages his own affairs. He is neither exploited nor dominated by others.

• Accurate judgment of reality — A normal person does not wear blinkers against awkward facts, does not impute to others motives that they do not have, nor see ghosts, no imagine slights and insults.

• Integration — A normal person does not behave in a Jekyll and Hyde fashion.

Prof. Walton said that some features which convey a person is not functioning normally include:

INABILITY TO WORK; working so intensively it excludes all other interests; frequent quarrels with workmates or friends; a feeling of being disliked and rejected; over-dependence on family for love, approval and advice; tyrannizing wife and family; morbid jealousy of his or her spouse; neglecting his or her appearance; distaste for sex and lack of tenderness toward a sexual partner.

In his survey of personality abnormalities, Walton said too little attention was paid to the fact that women alcoholics are less amenable to treatment than men.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My boyfriend was rejected by the Army because his blood pressure was 165-80. Should he see a doctor now or when he gets older? His heart is fine and according to an Army doctor, he just has to watch it as he gets older. Could you tell us something about this.

Dear Reader — In some otherwise healthy individuals the blood pressure tends to fluctuate. Some individuals respond to stressful situations by a rise in the blood pressure. After the stress is eliminated, the blood pressure may be perfectly normal.

Some studies show that even a single blood pressure reading over 135 in a young man is associated with a higher incidence of heart disease later in life. Individuals who tend to have elevated readings, even on casual examinations, should have a fairly complete examination by a doctor who will be able to see them periodically in the subsequent year.

Such individuals should exercise particular caution in terms of diet, exercise, habits and leading the kind of life that we believe helps prevent heart and vascular disease. Most problems from high blood pressure are caused by the fatty deposits that are prone to develop in the arteries. This leads to heart attacks, strokes, and other problems.

Your boyfriend would be smart to eliminate any obesity that he might have now and be scrupulously careful not to develop any fat underneath his skin around the small of his back or over his waist. He should follow the dietary recommendations made by the Inter-Society Commission on Heart Disease to limit his fat intake, particularly that from beef, pork and mutton, and use more chicken and fish, and limit his cholesterol intake. This usually means avoiding excess use of egg yolks.

INDIVIDUALS who follow these and the other dietary recommendations made by the Commission are expected to have a better chance of avoiding problems from elevated blood pressure. The whole subject of dietary measures to prevent atherosclerosis and heart disease is important to individuals who have elevated blood pressure. Those who want more information on diet should see my book, "What You Need to Know About Food and Cooking For Health," (The Viking Press, 625 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022, price $10).

Individuals with elevated blood pressure should avoid cigarets. Cigaret smoking combined with elevated blood pressure will greatly increase the likelihood of health problems later in life. An individual who has high blood fat or cholesterol levels, often associated with improper diet and inadequate exercise, plus smoking, plus elevated blood pressure, is eight times as likely to have heart and vascular disease as individuals who do not have these findings, so I would like to strongly recommend that your boyfriend start a program today that will prevent his problems tomorrow. If he waits until tomorrow, it may be too late.

Jim: "How about some examples of bad rubber bridge?"

Jim: "The bidding shows that North either didn't realize he had tremendous diamond support or that he intended to wait in the bushes. In any event his failure to raise diamonds immediately led to East's double."

Oswald: "Had West opened a trump the four-diamond contract could have been set one trick, but West elected to open a spade. South let him hold the trick. West shifted to a heart. East took his king and led a second spade. After that start South managed to take the rest of the tricks."

Jim: "How did he manage the overtrick?"

Oswald: "He took the spade; ruffed a heart in dummy; led the king of clubs; ruffed the trick after east produced the ace. Then he ruffed another heart; discarded his jack of spades on the queen of clubs and led the last spade. East ruffed with his king, South overruffed. After that the rest of the tricks developed with a straight cross-ruff."

Tuesdays are Terrific!

The Herald makes your Tuesdays more interesting by giving you a whole lot more than top local news coverage. Here's just a sampling of the extras you get:

"Compass" — Your Guide to Travel (visit spots around the nation and the world)

"Travel Lore" by Clare Wright (latest tips from the travel industry)

"Travel Briefs" (quickies on special tours and services)

"Dorothy Meyer" (a whimsical view of events in this columnist's life)

"Business Today" (a look at some aspect of the business world)

"Ask the IRS" (questions and answers on those all-important federal tax matters)

"Next on the Agenda" (upcoming events of local clubs)

"Fan Fare" by Walt Ditzen (watch yourself in this cartoon on the avid sports fan)

"Word a Day" (easy way to add to your vocabulary)

"Larry Everhart" (inside stories on area sports)

"Movie Roundup" (what's showing at the local theatres)

"Want Ads" (most popular want ad marketplace in the northwest suburbs)

"Suburban Living" (a full section devoted to today's suburban women)

Tuesday and every day of the week,
The Herald gives you more to enjoy!

"bright and early"

There are many individual and specific causes for suicides among the aged, but most seem to come down to. . .

No reasons for living

Stories by Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — It was a neighbor who first called the police. She said she had not seen the old man in the next apartment for a week.

"He's in a wheelchair and I can usually hear him moving around, but it's been quiet for days."

When officers broke through the locked door they found the body of a 75-year old man slumped in a heap on the linoleum floor. A shut-in with no friends or relatives, he had killed himself with an overdose of pills, then lay undetected, until he was finally missed.

The story is depressingly familiar in America. Alone, depressed, often sick and unwanted, the nation's elderly (especially men) are taking their own lives with alarming regularity. Statistics in The World Almanac indicate that the suicide rate in 1967 for men 65 and over is 38.1 for every 100,000, seven points higher than men in the 45-60 category and nearly twice the total of men in the 19-44 age grouping.

WHAT'S MORE, the statistics increase as do the years beyond 65. Dr. Norman Farberow, director of the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention League, says the 65 and above rate in California is as high as 60 per 100,000 and grows to 65 for people 75 and older. It stands to reason, adds Farberow: the older one gets, the more the chance for deep depression and the wish to get life over with quickly.

And generally, the elderly suicides do get it over with quickly. No dramatics for them, no games (such as making phone calls) which indicate the threat is in reality a cry for help; old people tend to kill themselves with neither ritual nor delay. Dr. Robert Kastenbaum of the American Association of Suicidology says that many older people "make their decision and then act." An overdose, a spoon of poison, a bullet in the head. The seriousness of their intent is thus part of the problem — it makes helping them that much more difficult.

Helping them, indeed, is a baffling enigma for those concerned. Farberow says that old people with problems are somewhat like young people with problems, in that "you have to help them solve their problems," but this is easier said than done with the elderly. A young man's problem may be marital or economic (two common crises heard by suicide prevention people) and may be corrected with the application of common remedies. As for the aged, however, says Harry Warren of New York's National Save A Life League:

"They call in here, 70-75-80 years old. Maybe they're in wheelchairs. Maybe they have terminal cancer. Maybe their relatives are gone and their friends dead. What can you say to people like this to make them feel any better?"

There seems to be little anyone can say. In fact, it is not absolutely certain that society wants to say anything. Many geriatric specialists agree that society gives older people precious little reason to live, and in fact feels it would be better if they were out of the way.

"People," wrote Ogden Nash, "expect old men to die; they look at them with eyes that wonder when." This is not to say society wants the old folks to cut their throats, but there is substantial evidence that public apathy and prejudice for the old often force exactly that.

Says L. A.'s Farberow: "I think it is true that we make it very hard for the elderly to live happily. As a nation we have tended to eulogize and overpraise the young, and ignore the old. We force people to retire at certain ages, thus force them to resign, in many cases, at the peak of the functioning powers. We force them to accept a less contributory existence and many of them just can't do it."

THERE ARE a lot of reasons for suicide among the aged, Farberow adds, but the most important is this loss of engagement, of self-esteem. "What we do to the old, in other words, is to take away their reason for living."

That reason, too often, is not only "self-esteem" but "youth." America, the land where over 30 is considered the beginning of a terminal disease, is a civilization where people say they would rather die than grow old. Actually, in a study by Robert Kastenbaum (concerning student attitudes toward old age), 25 per cent of the respondents said they wanted to die before they expected to die. "I suppose," says Kastenbaum, "they didn't want to become enfeebled or whatever."

The fear of enfeeblement is quite natural. H. L. Mencken said that "No show is so good it should run forever." Besides, growing old is undeniably, as things have traditionally stood, a bother. Every generation sees its old people shuffled off to the nursing homes, boarding rooms, welfare hotels or other warehouses. Every generation sees its old hobbling down boulevards (for lack of transportation), sitting on park benches (in the absence of meaningful activity), and struggling with debt (because for the great majority on fixed income there is no alternative).

The sight of all this is deeply disturbing to youngsters; no wonder they fear it. But rather than solve what they see, rather than demand and create better times for their seniors, each new generation merely accepts, then ignores or fears the inevitable end.

UNFORTUNATELY, so it continues, the end for some is worse than for others. Dr. Robert Butler, consultant to the White House Conference on Aging, tells of an elderly hospital patient who would stand for hours criticizing his reflection in a mirror, then later deny totally that the image was his. Like so many in America, conditioned to think young, he could not admit the alternative. As. W. Somerset Maugham once wrote: "What makes old age hard to bear is not the fading of one's faculties, but the burden of one's memories."

Therefore, for many, in today's careless world, suicide is the only solution. According to statistics, a man of 75 can expect to live eight more years; but for some, like the fellow in the first paragraph, the time is just too terrible to take.

Gray Power in the streets

being Old in america

NEW YORK — For the first few years of his retirement, 69-year-old Leo Klemm sat around his small Brooklyn apartment "counting the fibers in the rug and watching television reruns of 'I Love Lucy.' "

He was bored, lonely and useless.

"I got up in the morning and ate. Then I sat around until noon so I could eat again. After supper there was nothing to look forward to except breakfast. You might say I was just waiting to die."

No more. The other day klemm heard about a group of retired people staging a demonstration in lower Manhattan. He didn't know what it was for, nor did he care. "They were old people like me, that's all that counted." He hopped a subway, arrived on a mahogany cane and joined enthusiastically in the march.

"We chanted and shouted and walked around. Some of the women carried picket signs. Everybody was full of the bull. Oh, we had a hell of a time."

The senior protesters were marching in support of the Older Americans Act which Congress is trying to recycle after Richard Nixon vetoed the same legislation passed overwhelmingly last year.

KLEMM HAD a hell of a time. And now he promises there'll be no more Lucy reruns for him. He says he's going to join every Senior Citizen's organization he can find, "as long as I can ambulate," and rage away as a renewed, rejuvenated, if still old, member of humankind.

If he does he'll have plenty of company. Elderly Americans by the thousands are recommitting themselves and their energies to social activism. Some call it "Gray Power," the wags know it as the "Cane and Crutch Cause." But by any name it is an historical phenomenon.

No one is certain of precise statistics, but one White House official concerned with the aged estimates that more than six million seniors have in the last decade become members of activist organizations. Three million of them belong to one group alone, the National Council of Senior Citizens, whose organizational purpose is to provoke a better life for the nation's long neglected and suffering retireds.

THE TREND, says New York's Alice Brophy, is "spirited." And she should know. Thirty-eight years a governmental social worker, now director of New York City's Office for the Aging, Mrs. Brophy remembers when the average education of elderly people was the fourth grade, when few read newspapers, and when many oldsters succumbed to the zombie syndrome upon reaching retirement. Now, says Brophy, "The average education of oder people is eighth grade, some 87 per cent of them read daily newspapers, and most of them are more aware."

Add to this the fact that old people are living longer (the population over 75 is increasing 2.5 times the rate of the general population), and also the fact that they are healthier, says Alice Brophy, and Gray Power is not only spirited but inevitable. Social maturity has caught up with physical maturity. "The old no longer want to let the rest of the world push them around."

INDEED, A united elderly population would be most difficult to push around. Retired people make up 10 per cent of the population and at least 17 per cent of the electorate. As a body (20 million), they equal the combined populations of America's 21 smallest states. This muscle has been recognized for years by lip-licking politicians and youthful advocates of the aged. "But only in the last few years," says Alice Brophy, "have retired people begun speaking out forcefully for themselves."

Their gripes could not have come at a more crucial time. The condition of many old people in the nation is desperate. Nearly five million retired live in poverty. Their housing, transportation, health and security is unacceptable. Some old people in some cities are so hard up, says an official of the Los Angeles based League of Senior Citizens, "They have to eat dog food."

Ehst's more, even when help is available, the old are not always able to take advantage: Alice Brophy says that only 80,000 of the 250,000 eligible aged in New York City have applied for old age assistance.

THUS WITH these problems at hand the elderly have taken to the streets. Senior demonstrators have, in recent years, to name a few things, prevented Medicare cutbacks in New York State, forced the installation of traffic lights at dangerous intersections in Pontiac, Mich., lobbied successfully for reduced transit fares in dozens of cities.

Perhaps the most successful effort was last year when the Urban Elderly Coalition, a group with branches in 50 cities, Alice Brophy directing, helped push a 20 per cent Social Security increase through Congress and then helped ward off a promised presidential veto.

Not that the war has been won for the oldsters, however. And given the inherent problems of unifying this age group, it may never be. Despite the trend toward senior activism, the great majority of retirees still prefer docile anonymity to participatory democracy. Some are simply too weak or shutin to organize. Others follow the conservative notion of "the officials know best." And many have been dissuaded from squawking by the antics of squawkers who have gone before — "I'm no hippy," says an oldster, "you won't catch me making an ass of myself."

YET THE phenomenon of Gray Power continues. And grows. The first step to self improvement is self assertion, or whatever Norman Peale says. Thus many oldsters are on the march: protesting sex shows at neighborhood theaters, complaining about muggers in the city parks, letting Richard Nixon, etc., "know we're here."

As Leo Klemm says it: "I don't know if it does any good, but anything's better than reruns of 'I Love Lucy.' Heck, the old gal wasn't even very entertaining the first time around."

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

No one has precise statistics, but estimates are that more than six million senior citizens have turned activist in the last decade.

Broad Newspaper Background Aids Salesman Steve Witte

As far back as Steve Witte can remember his family has been in the newspaper business. His great great grandfather David M. Givler started it all when he bought the only newspaper in DuPage County in 1868 and named it the Naperville Clarion. Since then a family member has worked continuously in some phase of the newspaper industry.

Steve was no exception. As a teenager he literally grew up writing news stories, proofreading and selling advertising. After college and completion of his Army service Steve chose newspaper advertising as his career. His broad range of experience and knowledge has given him an unusual background upon which to draw when assisting such clients as the Mount Prospect Plaza Merchants Association and other major accounts.
